SHUMAN CORNER, BOSTON.

October 28, 1907

Boston American,

Boston, Mass

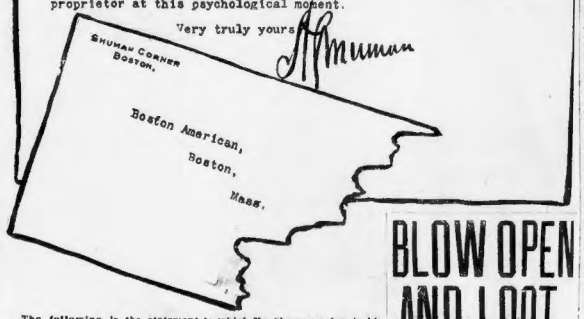
Gentlemen:--

I notice an article in the "Boston American" of Saturday, October 26th, over the signature of William Randolph Hearst, entitled "A Word to the Thoughtless".

It is wise, able, and conservative, and will do much good in helping to allay any feeling of uneasiness, and I am sure the business community, and the public at large, will appreciate the forceful expressions uttered by your distinguished proprietor at this psychological moment.

Very truly yours

A Shuman



The following is the statement to which Mr. Shuman refers in his letter, a facsimile of which is printed above:

A WORD TO THE THOUGHTLESS.

To the wise no word is necessary. Men of knowledge understand full well that the country was never more prosperous, and that a panic in the midst of such unexampled industrial and commercial activity as this nation has recently enjoyed, and still enjoys, is a grotesque absurdity.

The reasoning of those persons who are now participating in runs upon perfectly solvent banking institutions is on a par with that of those officers who think they need have no concern about the conduct of government because they merely pay rent.

The informed man knows that those who pay rent are as much taxpayers as those who own the houses in which they live. Their concern with government is equally as great as that of the property owner.

Likewise the man who draws money from a perfectly solvent bank in such a time as this, instead of protecting himself, may be promoting his own undoing.

Credit is the life-blood of business. If banks fail business will totter. If business is wrecked employment will cease. And what will it profit a man if he get his small hoard from a bank at the price of his business or of his job?

Think of this before you join a line of the panic-stricken.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

BLOW OPEN AND LOOT HUB SAFES

One safe was blown and looted and three offices forced open and robbed in the office building at No. 31 Exchange place sometime during the night.

Right in the heart of the banking district of Boston, within a stone's throw of the City Hall avenue police station and the postoffice, a gang of crooks which the police seem to think are well organized and trained operated last night at their will.

Janitor Discovers Breaks.

The janitor in the office building in Exchange place found the breaks early today when he came to work, and reported them to the police, who maintained complete silence until about noon.

The office of Herbert E. Moody, managed by a Mr. More, a coin dealer, was broken into by forcing the outer door. The safe was blown open with powder and the police admit that at least $50 was taken.

The office was on the second floor. On the third floor the clothing establishment of William F. Foley was broken into and $12.65 in cash and $11 in stamps taken. A pile of clothing was taken from this office to the office of More and wrapped around the safe to deaden the sound of the explosion.

On the fourth floor the office of Charles A. Darling was forced, but the police say that nothing was taken here.

FARMERS PLAN WAR ON BOSTON MILK TRUST

Special to the Boston American.

WORCESTER, Oct. 29.—Five hundred farmers from all over Worcester County gathered in Horticultural Hall to-day in a mass meeting which it is expected will result in the formation of an independent co-operative milk concern which will enter the Boston field in opposition to the contractors.

There was rumor about the hall that representatives of the milk trust were on hand and would tender an offer of 40 cents a can, the price which the Worcester County producers claimed was the lowest they could sell milk at a profit.

Thomas W. Lawson is expected to be present and tender an offer of assistance. His secretary, Edward F. Mcskweney, arrived after the meeting opened at 11 o'clock.

General Charles W. Woods of Shrewsbury, the leading spirit of the opposition to the Boston contractors, presided. In making his address to the meeting General Wood said, among other things:

Urge Farmers to Fight.

"We shall not see milk sold in Boston on a competitive basis and cease to maintain automobiles for contractors to run down the citizens in our streets.

"The time is now ripe for such action as must be taken to throw off the grasp of the contractors which has slowly been tightening for the last quarter of a century. It is time that farmers cease to be farmers and become men to fight for their rights.

"One word of encouragement I have for you. Every candidate for the Legislature in Worcester County at once and prominent in a larger district is absolutely committed in favor of the farmers.

"Governor Guild telephoned me to-day that he was in heartfelt sympathy with our movement."

Issues Statement Regarding Attempt to Show That He Dismissed the Cases Against the Telephone Grafters Because of "Fear of Exposure."

District Attorney Moran to-day made the following statement in regard to publications in certain morning papers to the effect that he had been forced to drop the cases against the telephone pay-roll grafters by threats of exposure:

Substantially all of the statements contained in the morning papers relative to the telephone cases are absolute falsehoods.

I performed my duty in presenting the evidence to the grand jury. The grand jury faithfully performed its duty in finding indictments upon the sworn evidence heard by it against each of the defendants.

This evidence, if uncontradicted, would have secured conviction.

The defendants, however, denied the facts asserted by the government's witnesses. As in each case we had only one witness against the defendant, the trial jury would probably disagree.

Each of the defendants filed motions and pleas dilatory in their nature, raising various questions of law, including the question of the constitutionality of the law.

Mr. Dwyer, my assistant, made a careful study of this question and reported to me that there was too much doubt as to our success in the United States Supreme Court to justify us in further proceeding with the cases.

The corporation defendant was willing to pay a small fine, but Mr. Dwyer and I saw no reason why we should treat it differently from the individual defendants.

Thereupon it became the duty of the district attorney to exercise his discretion as to whether he should proceed further, and, learning from the defendant's lawyers that the defendants did not object to a nol pros, Mr. Dwyer disposed of the cases that way.

The only person outside of my office staff and the lawyers for the defendants, with whom I talked on this matter, before the cases were actually nol prossed was my brother, with whom I discussed the law.

The political aspect of the cases was never discussed by me with anyone.

I could have held the cases until after election had I been so inclined. They could not have been marked for trial in nominal order until after the latter part of November.

The effect politically to me is of no consequence and was never considered by me.

No act of mine as district attorney has ever been influenced by political considerations. I do what the law and the best interests of the Commonwealth requires, absolutely disregarding myself.

BERLIN MOB TRIES TO LYNCH VON MOLTKE

FORMER FRIEND OF KAISER ASSAILED AFTER EDITOR'S ACQUITTAL.

BERLIN, Oct. 29.—Editor Maximilian Harden of the Zunkunft was acquitted in the civil Court to-day on the charge of libelling General Count Cuno von Moltke. The count was ordered to pay the costs of the case.

Von Moltke started violently when Justice Kern announced the verdict. Then he settled back in his chair like a man stricken by a mortal wound. He sobbed. The justice took twenty minutes to finish reading his judgment. In that time the count seemed to age as many years.

A new horror awaited him as his friends helped him, tottering and trembling, to the courtroom door. The street was packed, and as he appeared a hurricane of hisses, hoots, vile epithets and vituperative cries fairly swept him from his feet.

"Oh, I am ruined! I am damned! Would I were dead," cried the count.

FRIENDS DREW SWORDS.

His friends tried to force a way for him through the crowd. A shower of stones and filth from the street beat them back.

"Down with the noble wife-beater! Death to the moral leper!" screamed the people, rushing at the group.

Von Moltke's friends drew their swords, but the Count himself cowered back toward the entrance to the law courts without an effort to defend himself. His face was ashen, his manner that of a man walking in a dream.

The police, though put on their guard by the vast gathering in the street as the hour approached for the announcement of Justice Kern's judgment, were unprepared for so violent an outbreak. They quickly came to the rescue, however. Beating back the throng with the flat of their swords, they finally opened a narrow lane to the Count's carriage. Even then the mob cursed and spat at the wretched nobleman as he was fairly dragged to the carriage and lifted into his seat.

A detachment of mounted men formed about him, and thus guarded he was driven home at top speed.

CROWDS CHEER HARDEN.

Harden, in the meantime, was having hard work to escape suffocation under the avalanche of congratulations heaped upon him. A throng of spectators rushed toward him the moment the verdict was announced, and the court room was in an uproar in an instant. The attendants restored order with much difficulty, and the moment the reading of the judgment was finished a cheering group of friends fairly threw themselves upon the editor, lifted him in their arms and carried him from the court room in triumph.

Outside, the crowd greeted him with an enthusiasm equalling the fury with which von Moltke had been received. His progress to his home was a continual ovation, and a cheering crowd still surrounds his house.

The courtroom was jammed to the doors at the hour for the opening of the session. The army, the bar and the court were brilliantly represented. There was a breathless hush as Justice Kern, in black velvet cap and gown, took his seat. He outlined the verdict with his opening words. Then the congratulatory rush for Harden and the hysterical sobbing of von Moltke interrupted him.

It was many minutes before order was restored. As soon as quietness prevailed again, the justice expounded his reasons for the decision in Harden's favor. The entire evidence, he said, confirmed the editor's accusations beyond the shadow of a doubt. Von Moltke, he declared, was unquestionably characterized at least by an inclination toward the shocking bestial ities attributed to him.

Who Has Rooms to Let?

I can let them for you. You wonder how I can do it, when you have had cards in your windows and have been trying to let them for weeks. Why, it is a simple matter. I go to more than 300,000 people each day in the year. I talk to Merchants, Mechanics, Financiers, Stenographers, Clerks, Bookkeepers, Travelers and to all classes by the thousands. I tell them where their Wants can be supplied. They come to me when looking for anything, because they know they will find it. When they want to secure rooms they look for me in the Board and Rooms Column. I am always there to give them what they want.

15,000 HUNT LONDON FOR LOST PRINCESS

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—Urged by the frantic appeals of the Russian Embassy, 15,000 police and detectives are furiously turning London upside down to-day in their hunt for the Princess Barbara Lapoukine, the eighteen-year-old daughter of the former director of St. Petersburg police, who was sensationally kidnaped Thursday night as she was returning from the Aldwych Theatre with her governess.

Lapoukine will arrive in London to-morrow to aid in the search for his daughter. He has telegraphed to London that he will gladly meet any expense and accede to any terms to insure his daughter's return to him in safety.

Letter From Prisoner.

The letter received from the young woman, in which the writer declares her determination to poison herself, was evidently mailed in some part of London distinct from the place of her confinement. The entire locality from which it was postmarked having been searched literally inch by inch.

The police theory is that the girl's captors knew the letter was to be mailed and did not interfere with it, either because they propose to use it as a means of extorting money or because they sought to torture the prisoner's friends still further by permitting them to hear definitely of her desperate plight.

Miss Russell, the English governess with whom the princess and her sister were completing their education in London, is almost beside herself with grief and anxiety.

She ridicules the suggestion that the girl might have left of her own accord.

The police agree with Miss Russell that the case is one of kidnapping and not elopement. They say the alarm was given so quickly through the Russian embassy that though not at once to Scotland Yard—that they believe the abductors had no time to leave London with their prisoner.

Lapoukine has long been hated both by the Russian revolutionaries and the reactionary Black Hundreds. He was General Trepoff's right-hand man during the 1905 riots in St. Petersburg. To the Black Hundreds he gave credence for his part in exposing the machinery through which anti-Jewish outbreaks were perpetrated.

The search having proved unavailing up to noon, 15,000 police, including entire available detective force at Scotland Yard, was put to work on the case and two clues were promptly turned up.

Broach Clue to Girl.

The first was the discovery, in a London pawn shop, of the brooch which Miss Lapoukine wore. She was giving to a "little girl" for mailing a letter to the former friends. The brooch was pawned Saturday night.

The second was obtained through a boarding house keeper, who says an elderly Russian woman applied to her Thursday night for lodging for herself and a young country woman. Accommodations were refused because the house was full.

Visits are being made to every boarding house in London, and every known Russian revolutionist in England is under surveillance. All provincial police stations have also been supplied with descriptions of the missing girl. The conviction is growing that she is the victim of a political crime.

Kidnapped at Theatre.

The Princess attended the Aldwych Theatre with a sister and their governess Thursday night. As they were leaving the theatre the girl was snatched from her companions, bundled into a waiting carriage and driven away before there was time to give an alarm. The sister and governess are not even sure how many men were in the party of kidnappers and can give no description of them whatever.

The Princess is described one of the most beautiful young women in London, where she has been for some time completing her education.

FALSE STATEMENTS ANSWERED BY MORAN

The newspaper report which caused Mr. Moran to issue the foregoing statement, alleged that Mr. Moran had been threatened by attorneys for the defendants in the telephone cases that they would expose him in court for alleged double dealing with them in regard to these cases.

The report alleged that Grenville S. MacFarland had forced Mr. Moran to recede from some alleged promises to not press these cases.

It further alleged that Mr. MacFarland had threatened Mr. Moran with the displeasure of the Independence League, and with an attack by the BOSTON AMERICAN. In case Mr. Moran did not withdraw his agreement to nolle prosse the telephone cases.

Every one of these statements, in the report which Mr. Moran refers to above, is a falsehood.

MARKET OPENS WITH STOCKS IN DECLINE

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—With the financial crisis safely past, banks opened for business to-day with conditions normal. Although a few depositors lined up at some of the smaller banks, no further suspensions were reported.

The stock market opened with most issues showing declines. Canadian Pacific reflected the weakness in London, opening 2½ lower. Baltimore & Ohio opened a point lower and New York Central, Great Northern preferred and Union Pacific declined half per cent. Watchhon, United States Steel preferred, Southern Pacific were unchanged. Sugar opened half lower and steel common declined one-half. Smelting opened one-eighth higher and copper and Northern Pacific opened one-half better. Transactions were on a small scale.

The Board of Directors of the Pittsburg Stock Exchange decided to remain closed to-day. No official statement was given out, other than that the board deemed it best not to open yet.

The feature of the trading in the first hour in the market was the closing out of many long accounts in such stocks like New York Central, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Reading, Pennsylvania and St. Paul were largely held.

There were many reports current of banks further curtailing accommodations but redeeming part of their loans daily. Pennsylvania was extremely weak under this selling, falling over four points and was closely followed on the downward movement by both Union Pacific and New York Central. The heaviness of New York Central and Pennsylvania was regarded as significant because these stocks were firmly held all through the demoralized markets last week.

CROWDS CHEER LEAGUE LEADERS AT 4 ROUSING RALLIES

Hisgen and Brown Given Ovations at Hudson and Marlboro—Rallies in Boston and New Bedford.

Four Independence League rallies, the most enthusiastic since the beginning of the political campaign, were held last night.

Candidates of the League and other leading citizens who believe in its principles were heard by large crowds in the Dudley Street Opera House, Boston, in the City Hall at New Bedford, in Russell Hall, Marlboro, and in the Town Hall at Hudson.

At the monster rally in the Dudley Street Opera House Captain Thomas L. Bates charged that Alderman Tilton S. Bell incorporated a $25,000 item in the famous Boston $1,500,000 loan bill for the purchase of Savin Hill Park, which the owners had offered to sell for $20,000. "By what right, Mr. Bell, did you provide for the payment of $5,000 above what the owners had offered to sell the property to the city for?" asked Captain Bates.

Thomas L. Hisgen, candidate for Governor, and E. Gerry Brown, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, addressed audiences at Marlboro and Hudson. They were cheered before they began their speeches, when they made points which appealed to the voters who have tired of the domination of the trusts, and the cheers and applause when they concluded were more enthusiastic, more expressive of the real feelings of the voters than anything that has ever been heard in Hudson or Marlboro.

Monopoly Evils Attacked.

The situation that confronts the people was told in a way that every hearer understood by Clement L. Pollock of Boston in an able address he made at the Hudson rally.

He attacked the Boston & Maine-New Haven Railroad merger and the Standard Oil monopoly, against which Hisgen has made a successful fight, and showed inconsistencies in the pretensions of the candidates of the Republican and Democratic parties.

"The people of Massachusetts are face to face with a situation that is causing them to think," said Mr. Pollock. "There is no mystery about the issues this year. The question is whether you are for the Railroad Trust, the Ice Trust and other trusts that hold the State and country in their relentless clutches.

"Because of the cornering of the commodities of the country by these great corporations prices have soared to the sky. The spectre of famine is already hovering about thousands of hearthstones. Women and children are in want. Luxurious living has been flaunted in the faces of those who have been forced to slave for an existence.

"From a distance men, women and children have been forced to look with helpless wonder upon the growing resurgence on this carnival of wine, women and song presented by the spendthrift sons and daughters of wealth. No field has been safe from and no realm of endeavor sacred to the trusts. They have even entered the church."

Great Ovation for Hisgen.

Mr. Hisgen's speech was short, because it was 10 o'clock before he reached the hall. He received one of the heartiest greetings that has been accorded him since the beginning of the campaign, and it was several minutes before he could commence his address.

He denounced the trusts as being responsible for the sufferings in our homes and promised the audience an honest, efficient and common sense administration, free from trust domination if elected.

That the people of Hudson believe in Mr. Hisgen and the principles of the league was evidenced by the crowd of voters who participated in the parade, led by a drum corps, through the streets, ablaze with red fire, before the rally.

E. Gerry Brown was the first speaker, as he had to hurry to Marlboro to address the hundreds gathered in Russell Hall in that city. He took up the labor phase of the campaign, and showed that citizens who earned their own living would be voting against their own interests if they supported Eben S. Draper.

Guild Friend of Trusts.

Mr. Brown was followed by Mr. Pollock.

"The corporation men," said Mr. Pollock, "will vote for Guild because he is their friend, and for Draper because he is one of them.

"Mellen, the king of the New Haven railway, although living in another State, has come out for Guild. He declares that he would work for him and vote for him if he were a resident of Massachusetts. That is a tip as to where the railroads stand on the Guild-Draper ticket.

The political grafters of the Republican party are out for Guild and Draper. The corporations and political leaders place them down as their first asset.

"In a recent speech Congressman McCall mentioned the fact that it was necessary for us to have two political parties, one to act as a check on the other. But with the two old parties in this State each under the same control, each dominated by the trusts and corporations, it is impossible for one to check the other so far as interests of the people are concerned.

And this is the reason why the Independence League has been organized as a political party and to-day is the only live organization that stands as a protection for the great mass of people from the organized plunderers of the land.

"At the head of the League ticket is a man who, instead of being in the toils of the trusts, has fought successfully the father of them all.

Money Rules Old Parties

"The leaders of the two old parties have fallen into the grasp of the money power, and are completely dominated by it in this and other States.

"The railroads are the real promoters of the trusts, and they are at the bottom of the present high prices. Through their deadly systems of secret rebates they have swept from existence thousands of small dealers throughout the country. Through their high freight rates they have prevented commodities from reaching sections of the country where they were demanded. In order to pay dividends on watered stock to support a worthless generation, they have exacted passenger rates that the people could not afford to pay.

"Whitney should be ashamed to look a real Jeffersonian Democrat in the face. He has done what he could to murder the party in this State. And he did it with premeditated malice aforethought. He planned the deed alone. There were no accessories.

"Gathering about him a hungry horde of politicians he paid them and fed them. He has acknowledged that the 400 or 500 delegates that he claims he had cost him the enormous sum of $25,000—a more than $50 each. He gorged them with dinners. Lawson said that Whitney bought Republicans LIKE fish and sausages. Now he is buying votes WITH fish and sausages."

Junius T. Auerbach of Boston, who spoke in Hudson last year, was warmly received, and made a distinct hit. Mr. Auerbach took up the real heart to heart issues of the campaign—high prices in the home.

He showed how the trusts are responsible for such high prices. He arraigned Guild for never having done anything for the great mass of the people and Draper as being the arch enemy of labor. When Mr. Auerbach finished three cheers were proposed and given him with a will.

Charles O. Power, executive secretary of the Independence League of Boston, followed with a discussion of the men offered as candidates by the League. Mr. Power told of the splendid work at the State House of Senator John J. Mitchell, and it was apparent at once that the audience was with him.

Mr. Power took occasion to explain the incorporation of the Independence League when the movement was first started, and how this incorporation was finished when the league became a political party last year. When he mentioned the name of John B. Moran it was greeted with vociferous applause.

Walter L. Ramsdell, former Mayor of Lynn, followed Mr. Power.

Before 800 people gathered in Russell Hall, Marlboro, last night, there was a big parade of Independence Leaguers through the principal streets, headed by the Guard of Honor Drum Corps. Red fire was burned all along the route and at many points the paraders were cheered.

The principal speaker at the rally was Mr. Hisgen and the reception he received was cordial and hearty. For forty-five minutes he denounced the trusts and paid particular attention to the Standard Oil monopoly. He spoke strongly against the New York, New Haven & Hartford-Boston & Maine merger and the cheers and applause that punctuated his remarks on the subject showed that the people of Marlboro are with the League in its battle to prevent the grabbing by out side interests of the only railroad that is owned in Massachusetts.

Charles O. Power, executive secretary of the League, praised Senator John J. Mitchell of Marlboro, "an honest man with much ability who has stood for the rights of the people against monopoly," and urged that he be returned to the Senate.

The Hon. Walter L. Ramsdell, former Mayor of Lynn, dealt with the trusts and their evils, and E. Gerry Brown arraigned Lieutenant Governor Draper for his antagonism to anti-labor.

He charged the Republicans with furnishing the sinews of war to provoke a riot at the Springfield convention and gave many reasons why the voters of Massachusetts should not cast their ballots either for Whitney or Guild.

Mr. Brown was cheered when he told the story of Hopedale, with which so many union labor men of Marlboro are familiar.

Four Generations of the Fighting Hisgens

Independence League Candidate for Governor, of rugged German stock, his father being born in Europe.

William Ludwig Hisgen I. (at top). Thomas L. Hisgen (at bottom).

Here are four generations of Hisgens—William Ludwig, born 1773 in Leich, Germany; William Ludwig, born 1820; Thomas Louis, born Nov. 26, 1858, at Petersburg, Ind.; and Thomas Louis Hisgen, Jr., born at West Springfield, Mass., five years ago.

Mr. Hisgen, in town to-day for his campaign engagements to-night in Worcester, and Lynn, has with him a hand-painted miniature of his grandfather, brought to Boston for purposes of enlargement.

"Artists tell me," said Mr. Hisgen, "that this is a splendid specimen of the art of the miniature painter. Note the signature, 'Reinhardt,' and the year, 1796. We are naturally glad to be possessed of it at home, and I have just decided to have an enlargement made for one of my brothers."

William Ludwig Hisgen, the first, held a high official position under the Grand Duke of Hesse-Darmstadt. His son, father of the Independence League candidate for Governor, was also a native of Germany.

William Ludwig Hisgen II. (at top). Little Thomas L. Hisgen, Jr., (at bottom).

Thomas Hisgen's father emigrated to America and for many years was a country merchant in Indiana. He was also, in a small way, a chemist.

And then there is Thomas L., who speaks for himself, whom everybody knows, and whom almost everybody is going to vote for.

Thomas Louis Hisgen, Jr., a Yankee, born at West Springfield, Hampden County, Massachusetts, thus speaks for himself:

"And he's the best boy in Yankeedom," says his proud father.

pendence League in the old City Hall last night. Many persons who got to the hall after the speechmaking began were unable to secure seats. But they were satisfied to stand and were an those who most loudly applauded the speakers.

The sensation of the evening was the declaration by the Rev. Roland D. Sawyer of Haverhill that Henry H. Rogers is "the best example of the successful thief in America."

Fairhaven, across the river from New Bedford, is the home of Mr. Rogers, and those who know Mr. Rogers best applauded the loudest.

Washington A. Coles of Dorchester, the schoolboy chum of Thomas L. Hisgen, made a marked impression by his story of Hisgen's war on the trusts. Mr. Coles is totally blind, but his history of the League candidate's lasting friendship brought forth rounds of applause.

Mr. Coles told of the boyhood of Mr. Hisgen and the different events in his later life, especially his fight against Standard Oil.

Edward J. Cantwell of Fall River, candidate for State Treasurer, made an eloquent address, and he handled John Golden, president of the United Textile Workers, without gloves, and condemned his action in presenting to Henry M. Whitney a bouquet of roses on the occasion of his birthday recently. His remarks were also greeted with applause, although many of those in the hall were members of the United Textile Workers. He said:

Fought Trust to Standstill.

"I desire to point out in my own humble way the calibre of the man who has been chosen to save the people from the rule of the trusts and monopolies.

"He is a man endowed with character, who by sheer grit and unswerving fortitude has succeeded in vanquishing one of the most gigantic monopolies the world has ever known.

"The man sprung from the masses and has set an unparalleled example to the entire world. I refer to Thomas L. Hisgen, the man of blood and iron, the man who fearlessly entered the arena with the gloating tyrant of commercialism, and who said, let there be light and hugest competition, and there was light."

Thomas E. Flinnerty of Clinton, candidate for State Auditor, was introduced as the war horse in the labor movement. He spoke on the principles of the Independence League platform.

He declared Whitney was in the Rockefeller-Morgan class and that only dollars counted. "The principal boodlers will stand behind the breastworks of Whitney, which cost $5,000 a head," said Mr. Flinnerty.

"If Mr. Rogers will permit me to preach a sermon in that million dollar church of his and will listen to all that I have to say he will experience a worse shock than when he crawled out of the court a few weeks ago on the pretext of illness, but I don't want to preach, I want to talk politics," said the Rev. Mr. Sawyer.

William McLean, candidate for Representative, also spoke at New Bedford and held up the record of his Republican rival, A. P. Doyle, as a reason why the labor man should cast his vote against "the man who stood out against the labor bills."

Independence League Rallies

RALLIES are to be held as follows, at which Thomas L. Hisgen, candidate for Governor on the Independence League ticket, and other speakers are to appear during the week. The star in front of each city or town indicates where Mr. Hisgen will speak:

NATICK and *LYNN, tonight.
*LAWRENCE and *LOWELL, to-morrow night.
*WORCESTER, Thursday, October 31.
*SPRINGFIELD, *HOLYOKE, NORTHAMPTON and EASTHAMPTON, Friday, November 1.
*BOSTON, in Tremont Temple, Saturday, November 2.

OSGOOD ANSWERS LEAGUE TRADUCERS

That Alderman Tilton S. Bell of Ward 20 had an item of $25,000 for the purchase of Savin Hill Park incorporated in the $1,500,000 loan bill, after the owners had offered to sell it to the city for $20,000, was the charge made by Captain Thomas Bates at the Independence League rally at Dudley Street Opera House last night.

While an audience that nearly filled the hall listened with enthusiasm to Captain Bates, the League candidate for Senator in the Eight Suffolk District, recused the aldermen.

Query for Alderman Bell.

"I want to ask you, Alderman Bell, one question," declared the rugged Captain Bates, shaking his fist with determination.

"I want to ask you about the Savin Hill Park case. I will preface it with the statement that Dorchester, with its 100,000 population, is one of the most thriving sections of Boston. It has scarcely a park.

"I will read you a statement wherein the owners of the Savin Hill property declare that they must dispose of it; that they have been offered $25,000 by a quarry contractor, but that they are willing to sell it to the city for $20,000 for park purposes.

"I want to ask you, Alderman Bell, why you had incorporated in the notorious $1,500,000 loan bill of Mayor John F. Fitzgerald an item of $35,000 for the purchase of that park? By what right, Mr. Bell, did you provide for the payment of $5,000 above what the owners had offered to sell the property to the city for?

"And I want to ask you, Alderman Bell, why you went to Mayor Fitzgerald before you had had a conversation with Alderman Hattin, in which he had called your attention to the $5,000 excess and asked him to have that $5,000 stricken out of the bill?"

William N. Osgood, the League's candidate for Attorney General; Anson B. Edgerly and W. T. Sawyer were the other speakers.

Mr. Osgood delivered an address in which he explained clearly the purposes of the League. He said that for years he had conducted a campaign of abuse and misrepresentation, but that the League refused to be trapped that way into being put on the defensive.

"We have too many vital and important issues to present to the citizens, who are looking for real political action in their behalf, to be diverted from the great and responsible task we have undertaken," he declared.

Party Not Incorporated.

"It is true that the beginning of the League was small and that it was formed just as any literary or educational association is formed. It never had, and is not allowed under the law to have, capital stock, any more than a scientific league or association.

"But that was in the beginning. Since then the League has grown enormously and has become a political party. As a party it was never incorporated and cannot be under the law, and no one but an uninformed or frightened political writer would falsely make such a statement.

"A certain nervous individual has asserted that the 'stock in trade' of the League is attacking corporations.

"For years we have attacked only those corporations which are public monopolies based upon special privilege and using public property for the purpose of exploiting the people themselves by placing upon them burdens and taxes for the profit of aspiring men upon property, thoughtlessly surrendered by them.

"The Independence League has not disrupted any party. It has arisen after, not before, their disruption. When the great parties, Republican and Democratic, have permitted the management and direction of their affairs to be dictated by those who care more for special interests than they do public interest, self destruction is sure to follow."

Tools of the Trusts.

When Mellen, the Republican, and Whitney are striving to deliver both parties to the plunder of monopoly, they must expect the rank and file of the two organizations to desert them."

Mr. Osgood was vociferously applauded. Mr. Edgerly received a similar greeting. He said that Theodore Roosevelt dominated the Republican party, William Jennings Bryan the Democratic party and that William Randolph Hearst was the leader of the Independence League.

SOLD OUT TO RAYMOND

It pays to pay cash, even if you have to borrow money to do it. William Warren always said, at the old Boston Museum: "I am determined to live within my means, even if I have to borrow money to do it."

We never know where lightning is going to strike, nor do you ever know where your next dollar is going to sign, "Sold out to Raymond." It appeared last week at 160 Summer street, again in the Lane store, corner Franklin and Washington streets, and when you see this notice it will be found at the Old South Department Store, on Washington street, opposite Milk street.

No store too big, no store too little, no store too good. When you want to sell out for the quickest cash in Boston and avoid all the usual red tape, send for Raymond.

Here is another store just closed with our Mr. E. J. Brown, all settled and paid for and the keys in our possession.

Entire stock and fixtures of 359 Washington street, Dorchester, dry goods men's and women's and children's hosiery and underwear, ribbons and smallware. All to be moved as quickly as possible, and will be on sale Wednesday morning of this week in our Hawley street store. These goods are all just as staple as gold. We need say nothing about the price. All intelligent persons know what this means.

The following is a summary of the Old South Department Store stock. The part of which is already on sale, the balance being moved and marked as fast as possible, and found in all parts of our Washington and Hawley street store.

Optical Goods	1200.00
Leather Bags, etc.	2100.00
Men's Furnishing Goods	7200.00

CURLEY RING TRICKERY IS NOW EXPOSED

M. J. McEttrick, Independence League Senate Candidate, Warns the Voters.

MACHINE FACES DEFEAT

Michael J. McEttrick, who is running on the platform of the Independence League for the Massachusetts Senate in the Fourth District against Thomas F. Curley, the Tammany candidate, has sent out a warning to the voters of Wards 9, 12 and 17 to be on the lookout for men who are allied with the Tammany inner circle, and who are urging the election of Thomas F. Curley, to beware of committing themselves one way or the other on the senatorial question.

That the Curleys are desperate at the withdrawal of Thomas F. Phelan, the Independence League candidate for the Senate, and James Douglass, the Republican candidate, in the interests of Candidate McEttrick, is evidenced in the way they are appealing to the heads of departments in the city employ to secure the services of the subordinate city employes in an exhaustive canvass in the interest of the Curley candidacy.

The work is repulsive to the majority of the city employes, but they hesitate to remonstrate because it has been broadly hinted that if they voice an objection their jobs will be in jeopardy.

Gradually the people of Ward 17 are beginning to realize that success for the Tammany candidates for Senator and Representative means that Ward 17 will be represented in the coming Legislature by Dorchester politicians. In other words neither of the Tammany candidates live in the ward, both having residences in Dorchester, though for political purposes their home on the first of May is in Ward 17. Such conditions are not pleasing to the voters of Ward 17 and they are loudly demanding that Curley and Sheehan declare themselves on this issue. Both have remained silent.

Charles J. Kidney, a lifelong resident of Ward 17, the Independence League candidate for the House of Representatives, who is waging a redoubtable campaign against Frederick M. J. Sheehan, the candidate from Ward 20, who lives at No. 8 Holiday street, Dorchester, has challenged Mr. Sheehan to deny the fact that he was registered from Michael S. Drew's house, at No. 149 Eustis street, two years ago, and that when Drew fell out with the Curleys if he did not lose his voting address there. He further declares that he voted the next year as a voter from No. 183 Dudley street, Roxbury, when, as a matter of fact, he has always been a resident of Dorchester, attends church in that district, and can be seen almost daily taking the car in Dorchester for his office.

Michael J. McEttrick has warned the voters to be on the lookout for scurrilous statements. He says in part:

"For several days preceding the filing of nomination papers for Senator, a cowardly scheme, meant to confuse both voters and the Ballot Law Commission, was successfully but unsuccessfully worked by the Tammany agents of this city's desperate candidate and his unscrupulous associates.

"Fake nomination papers were circulated for the signature of voters. These dishonorable papers bore the name of another Michael J. McEttrick for State Senator, but, in fact, the name of a relative living in another ward—an employe of the city of Boston, who could neither be bullied nor bought—and a man who was not a candidate, but whose name was thus basely used without his knowledge or consent. This is only an additional sample of the favorite poison drops and blackjack treatment that is handed out to every honorable candidate who dares to dispute the progress of this Curley brand of politicians. This shameful attempt was foiled, but watch out for others."

TELL LOWELL OF THE AIMS OF IRISH LEAGUE

National President Ryan and Secretary O'Callaghan Address Big Meeting.

LOWELL, Oct. 29.—Welcomed to Lowell by a large and enthusiastic assemblage, Hon. M. J. Ryan, national president, and John O'Callaghan, national secretary of the United Irish League, made ringing addresses last night under the auspices of the Lowell branch of the league.

The speakers were accompanied to the platform by Rev. Fr. William O'Brien, P. R., of St. Patrick's church; Fr. Michael Ronan, pastor of St. Peter's; Fr. T. Wade Smith, O. M. I., pastor of St. Patrick's; Edward Gallagher of the Lowell branch, Police Commissioner John W. McEvoy, John C. Burke, Edward Cawley and a number of officers of the Lowell branch of the United Irish League.

President Edwin Gallagher called the meeting to order, and Fr. O'Brien, who was the presiding officer, told of his observations of the working of the land act in Ireland during his recent visit. He urged support for the league.

President Ryan spoke on the work and objects of the league, repeating much of what he said at the meeting in Boston Sunday night. He was followed by John O'Callaghan. Both speakers gave special attention to Sir Anthony MacDonnell, secretary for Ireland, and promised that he would be compelled before he left this country to say something of his visit in the United States.

Singing of Irish patriotic songs by Thomas P. Bodger and James E. Donnelly concluded the meeting.

JUDGE PRITCHARD COMING TO BOSTON

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Oct. 29.—Judge J. C. Pritchard of the United States Circuit Court left Asheville today for Boston and says he plans for an extended absence. It was announced that the railway rate cases will not come up here for argument on Judge Montgomery's report until after the middle of December.

GARVAN INJURED IN RUNAWAY CRASH

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Assistant District Attorney Frank P. Garvan, Jerome's right-hand man in the Thaw case, will suffer no serious consequences, it is said, from the painful injuries he received early today in a runaway in front of the Holy Aster. Garvan was in a hansom when the horse took fright and crashed into another cab.

TALENTED MISS MARY RYAN LOYAL TO THE IRISH CAUSE

Daughter of President Ryan, of the Irish League, his companion in his travels, enjoys visit to Boston.

With Michael J. Ryan, National President of the United Irish League of America, as he travels on his speaking tour, will be one of the brightest young Irish-American girls attached to the league—Miss Mary Ryan, the fourteen-year-old daughter of the National President. She is accompanying her father on the trip in which he is appealing for American assistance in Irish reforms.

Miss Ryan is deeply interested in the Irish cause and is well informed on the situation.

She is one of the honor students of the Academy of Notre Dame. She plays the piano and organ with the skill of a musician of more mature years. She will take an advanced course in music abroad when she graduates from Notre Dame. Besides being an accomplished instrumentalist, she has an excellent voice, and her numerous friends predict a brilliant musical career for her.

Miss Ryan accompanied her father to Boston, when he came here for his address in Ireland's behalf at the Hollis Street Theatre, Sunday. She stopped at the Hotel Bellevue. Miss Ryan spent the time here seeing the sights of Boston with Thomas B. Fitzpatrick's family. The young daughter of the Irish leader was enraptured with the many beauties of the Hub and its vicinity, particularly the park system and the points of historic interest.

POLICE AFTER YEGGMEN WHO RIDE IN AUTO

Boston police today are keeping a close watch for the four yeggmen who sought for the second time this year to break into the postoffice at Avon. A reward of $200 has been offered for the capture of the thieves, dead or alive. To these four men is charged the series of safe burglaries in five different towns. Two are no ordinary crooks, for in one of two instances the flying glimpses caught by different people have given a description of a big speedy touring car. Their attempt to rob the office at Avon was foiled through the courage of Dr. Robert A. Elliot, who exchanged shots with them. The police have raised the robbery as far as Boston and with the description given them by Dr. Elliot hope to nab him before many days.

Warned before the attempted break at Avon, the police and Dr. Elliot had arranged to have watchers at the postoffice during the night and to alarm the local police at the first appearance of the yeggs. This plan failed in part on account of the failure of Mrs. Elliot to awaken her husband at the appointed hour. The first discharge with nitroglycerin at the office aroused the family, and Dr. Elliot tried to get the police. The telephone failed to work until the burglars had fired a second charge wrecking the outer door of the postoffice safe. Then Dr. Elliot opened fire on the guard stationed by the yeggs outside the office. Just as the yeggs fled the police and neighbors, led by Chief Butler, with a shot gun, approached from all sides. They followed the flight of the yeggmen far enough to learn that they met an automobile at the North Stoughton road and came to Boston. One of the men is described as tall and wearing a slouch hat. Two were of medium height and the fourth was short.

GERRY SOCIETY CHARGE FOUGHT BY HITCHCOCK

Comedian, Arrested and Held in $3,000 Bail, Confers With Lawyer.

HEARING ON TO-MORROW

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—Raymond Hitchcock, the actor starring in "A Yankee Tourist" at the Astor Theatre, is to-day with his counsel, Attorney Herman Fromme, preparing his defence to charges placed against him, charging a felony, by the Gerry society, and in which a fifteen-year-old girl is the prosecuting witness. Hitchcock, who was arrested yesterday at the District Attorney's office, and arraigned before Magistrate Walsh in the Jefferson court, was held in $3,000 bail for a hearing to-morrow.

"What! Has such a charge been brought against me?" cried the comedian when Superintendent Moore and Agent Pierce of the Gerry Society placed him under arrest. As he said this his face blanched ashy white.

With Wife When Arrested.

Assistant District Attorney Francis P. Garvan had sent for Mr. Hitchcock when he arrived with his wife in an automobile from his country home at Great Neck, L. I., at the Astor Theatre.

Before Magistrate Walsh the charge in which Helen von Hagen, aged fifteen, was named as complainant, was read. The girl lives with her parents at No. 200 East Twenty-seventh street. The alleged offence with which the comedian is charged is declared to have taken place at No. 125 Forty-first street on or about November 28, 1906.

In arguing the case before the magistrate, when he demanded $5,000 bail, Mr. Garvan told the court that there were several other complainants against Hitchcock in addition to Helen von Hagen, and that they were all to be sent before the Grand Jury to testify.

After a spirited wrangle Magistrate Walsh fixed the bail at $3,000, and Hollis E. Cooley, manager for Henry W. Savage, gave bond. The examination of Hitchcock is to take place to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Attorney Fromme told the reporters after the hearing that these charges against Mr. Hitchcock had been all gone over by the District Attorney's office some months ago, and that nothing incriminating had been developed. An important witness for the prosecution is said to be Mrs. Cerge nette, who conducts the "House with Stained Glass Panels" in Forty-first street.

Makes Important Admissions.

Last Thursday, when Hitchcock was complainant in the West Side Police Court against Edward Voecks, whom he charged with blackmail, under cross-examination the actor, while denying the charges against him, admitted that he had taken Elsie Voecks and Helen von Hagen in his automobile to his country place at Great Neck at a time when Mrs. Hitchcock was absent from home. He admitted also that he had later taken them to his rooms in the Forty-first street house.

The girl who furnished Mr. Garvan with information yesterday, in addition to what Helen von Hagen had given him, was Flora Whiten. She had been present at the Voecks trial last week, but when told to stand up by the actor swore that he did not remember that he had ever seen her before.

MEET IN HUB CHURCH; LOVE; SOON TO WED

Persistence, Taught by Obstacle Races, Wins Bride for Star Y. M. C. A. Athlete.

MARRY IN PENNSYLVANIA

A romance that began two years ago in Tremont Methodist Church, at Tremont and Concord streets, will find its culmination Wednesday of next week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Graves, in Springboro, Pennsylvania, when Anne Elizabeth Graves, their talented and charming daughter, becomes the bride of a young Bostonian, Frederick C. Harrington of No. 23 Claremont park.

The bride-to-be was graduated last Spring from the New England Conservatory of Music, where she completed a course in voice and piano. Bright, accomplished, helpful, she was a great favorite with all who met her, and, in her own set at the conservatory, reigned as queen.

Met in Boston Church.

During her student days in Boston, Miss Graves was a constant attendant at Tremont Church.

Fred Harrington, one of the stars of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, is also a regular attendant at Tremont Church.

They met, the young athlete and the young student, at a social in the church which both attended. It was another case of love at first sight. Mr. Harrington secured an introduction at once.

But the little maid from Pennsylvania was shy.

"I am devoted to my art," she said, demurely.

"Find room in your heart for me, too," pleaded Fred Harrington.

He had to plead often, and long, and hard. But he found unexpected benefit from his many experiences in obstacle races and endurance runs at the Y. M. C. A., he enlisted Dan Cupid in his cause, and, together, they won.

To Wed at Bride's Home.

The ceremony will be performed Nov. 6 by the Rev. Dr. Smith, pastor of the M. E. Church at Springboro, not far from Erie, Pa.

The bride's father is a prosperous carriage builder. Mr. Harrington, the groom, is connected with a publishing house in Boston.

On their return from a leisurely visit to Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York, Mr. and Mrs. Harrington will make their home in Cambridge.

TWO WOMEN UNIDENTIFIED.

The bodies of two women are at the morgue awaiting identification. One of them is that of an aged woman who was found dead in her home on Auburn court, West End, about a week ago. The other is that of a woman between twenty-five and thirty years, who was found in the water at Commercial wharf some three weeks ago.

Why They Will Vote for Hisgen

He Represents the Principles of Either of the Old Parties Better Than Their Own Candidates

Thousands of Democrats and thousands of Republicans are saying, quietly, in the workshops, in the stores and on the farms, that they are going to vote for Thomas L. Hisgen for Governor of Massachusetts.

They are going to vote for him, not because they have abandoned the true principles of the parties to which they have long been attached, but because he represents the essence of those principles better than does either Henry M. Whitney or Curtis Guild, Jr.

In fact, the voters of this State understand that what Whitney and Guild really represent is in direct antagonism to all that Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln stood for in their personal lives and political work. Both Whitney and Guild stand for a new, secret and menacing third party which has usurped the name and organization of both the Democratic and the Republican parties and has bent them to the sinister policy of PUBLIC UTILITIES FOR PRIVATE LOOT.

Thomas L. Hisgen stands in the public eye as the antithesis of this. He is believed by the people to be a man who stands for the personal liberty doctrine of Jefferson's Democracy and for the EQUALITY BEFORE THE LAW PRINCIPLE of the real Republican party which elected Abraham Lincoln President of the United States.

Massachusetts voters who think will vote for Hisgen because he is in their eyes a better Democrat than Whitney and a better Republican than Guild. He was on the Democratic ticket last year, and he voted for Roosevelt in 1904.

He is a candidate of the people. Whitney and Guild are candidates of the Trusts.

WAR ON PLANT IN CHELSEA WON BY RESIDENTS

Determined Citizens Prevail on Aldermen to Revoke License for Rendering Concern.

LIVELY SESSION OF BOARD

After a lively session, lasting until midnight, the Chelsea Board of Aldermen voted to revoke the license for a rendering plant granted last fall to John H. Poole of Winthrop, to be located at the corner of Cottage street and Eastern avenue. Two hundred residents of the East Side, each a determined opponent of the plant, appeared in behalf of revoking the license. They were represented by Attorney Michael J. Sughrue, former District Attorney.

It was claimed by Alderman Ash, who was one of those who voted for the license, that the board had been deceived and that when it came up before he thought the proposition was a good one. Ex-Mayor Thomas Strahan, unable to appear, was active in the opposition.

Ex-Mayor George H. Carter, George M. Anthony, William E. Perry, William N. Jewell, Adam Bower, Alexander Abrahams, Thomas Henry, Fred A. Johnson, Postmaster H. B. Lambert, John J. Havey, George E. Bonnister, ex-Alderman William E. Hixon, Representative Thomas F. Driscoll, Jeremiah Donovan and Fletcher Osgood and Dr. Charles Leeds, Elmer L. French and Walter S. Wadsworth, trustees of the Fract Hospital, were opponents of the plant.

President Cheney of the board, who supported the motion to refer to the license committee, attacked Alderman Ash for his attitude, because he said Mr. Ash was one of those most in favor of granting the license last July. The motion to refer to the committee was lost and the board finally voted unanimously to revoke the license.

2 WOMEN IN COURT FIGHT FOR LITTLE BOY

Mother Who Tried to Take Son Away Pleads Not Guilty to Kidnapping Charge.

TO TRY CASE THURSDAY

Mrs. Mary E. Gove, the trained nurse of Winchendon, who was arrested, charged with attempting to kidnap her nine-year old son, Verde, from his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Savory of No. 2200 Highland avenue, Somerville, pleaded not guilty before Judge L. S. Wentworth to-day in the Somerville District Court. At the request of her attorney Lloyd Walsh of Fitchburg, the hearing was continued by the judge until 9 o'clock Thursday morning.

Dressed in a natty blue suit, with black hat, elbow gloves and blue fur boa, covered with a long blue veil, Mrs. Gove, somewhat nervous after her trying experiences of yesterday afternoon when she seized her child in Crocker street, beat Highland avenue and made off with him, pursued by a crowd of people led by Mrs. Savory, faced Judge Wentworth and declared that she was not guilty.

Mrs. Gove Quiet in Court.

There were no scenes, as Attorney Walsh had telephoned to Captain Perry asking that the case be postponed until Thursday. Except to plead not guilty to the charge of disturbing the police, Mrs. Gove did not utter a word in court, and when the case was continued until the fall of $100 fixed yesterday evening continued she turned and rapidly walked away, accompanied by a woman friend whose name was not divulged.

Mrs. Gove is the widow of Lieut. Gove, who died in Troy, N. Y., eight and one-half years ago, when their little boy was but six months old. She is about thirty-five years of age, is over six feet in height and is a very good looking woman.

After the death of Mr. Gove the child was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Savory. Mrs. Savory being a sister of Mr. Gove. Three years ago Mr. Savory was appointed guardian of the child by the Probate Court at Keene, N. H. The child was left with Thomas Savory of Troy, a brother, until Mrs. Gove got possession of the child. He was trying to a Catholic home in Holyoke and Walter S. Savory regained possession and brought the lad to Somerville.

Seized by His Mother.

On his way to buy some candy yesterday afternoon the child was seized by his mother in Crocker street. Screaming and kicking, the boy roused the neighborhood with his noise, and Mrs. Savory, who had been fearing this very thing, dashed out after the mother, who started to run with the struggling child. Other neighbors joined in the pursuit.

"Stop that woman!" they all shouted, and Elmire Buckley, happening along at that time, seized Mrs. Gove and held her until a policeman came.

"Verde has a good home with us, loves us and wants to live with us," says Mrs. Savory. "We believe that we can legally keep him and we will fight the case to the bitter end. We have cared for him almost all of his life, and his own mother has paid nothing for his support."

FAMOUS NEWSPAPERMAN DROPS DEAD IN STREET

John Patrick Barrett, of the San Francisco Examiner, Who Stood at His Post During Earthquake and Sent Last News to Outside World, Stricken.

By Edward H. Hamilton.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 29.—There died suddenly in this city yesterday John Patrick Barrett, city editor of the San Francisco Examiner, and when he passed away there died the man who promised to be the greatest exponent of "the journalism that acts," in all this great wide world, and as true-hearted and gentle a man as this State has ever known.

He was taken out of life with hardly an instant's warning, passing in a very short time from the most abounding health to the cold and rigor of death.

There was nothing of premonition. He arose in his usual time, sent some orders to the office over the telephone and made his preparations for a trip to Oakland. Near Eddy street and Van Ness avenue he paused to chat with friends and was in his usual jocular mood.

Stricken in an Instant.

When he walked on the corner, shortly after the noon hour, he met Joseph M. Cummings, secretary of the Mechanics Institute Library, whom he long long had known through a mutual love for books, and, suddenly, as the two chatted, Mr. Barrett complained of a peculiar dimness in one eye and then of a numbness in his left hand. He asked to be led to a seat, and then declared he had gone entirely blind.

Seeing that the illness was serious, Cummings secured a nearby automobile and Rudolph Fisher and Thomas Bell followed accompanied the sick man to his home at No 945 Oak street. There he was attended by Doctors Gallway, Meade and McGettigan, while the Rev. Father Joseph McQuade administered the last rites of the church. Mr. Barrett died peacefully, his widow and infant daughter and his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Barrett being with him at the end.

Hero of the Earthquake.

Such is the statement of a tragedy that has stunned the Examiner office and will shock the press throughout the civilized world—that press having only a year and a half ago lauded its columns with praises for Barrett, the hero of the great earthquake, who stuck to his place amid tumbling bricks and crashing walls to send out the story of the catastrophe over the last wire leading from San Francisco.

Mr. Barrett was born in Dublin, Ireland, on March 4, 1874, so he was but thirty-three years of age, though he had achieved a proud place in his profession. His father, a skilled baker, brought him and his mother to San Francisco when the lad was but four years of age. Here he grew up and was educated, graduating from St. Ignatius' College with the prediction of his venerable teachers that he would make a name in the world.

At the age of fifteen years he began his career in the newspaper world, accepting a subordinate place on the Chronicle. In 1895 he came to the Examiner and accepted all sorts of assignments in the local room. He rose gradually to the position of city editor and assistant managing editor.

LINCOLN ASKS FOR RESPITE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 29.—Levi C. Lincoln, former general manager of the Woonsocket Electric Machine and Power Company, and self-confessed embezzler of $47,500, appeared before Justice Mumford in the criminal division of the Superior Court yesterday and entered a plea of nolo contendere to two indictments of embezzlement which the June grand jury found against him.

Attorney General William B. Greenough explained to the court that he understood that the wife and daughter of the defendant were much depressed over the action of the husband and father, and their health was severely undermined. In view of this he asked that sentence be deferred till November 18, and this course was agreed upon. An indictment of forgery also hangs over the defendant, but this will probably be nol prossed when the prisoner is brought in for sentence three weeks hence.

FARES RAISED; PATRONS WALK

Special to the Boston American.

SEABROOK, N. H., Oct. 29.—Rather than pay the Exeter, Hampton & Amesbury Railroad an extra penny, hundreds of factory employes working in Amesbury, Exeter, Hampton and Newburyport are daily walking from four to eight miles to and from their places of employment.

The company recently raised the fare from five cents to six cents, though there was a loud protest from residents of all the towns which patronize the road. The road officials declare that they recently expended a large sum of money for improvements on the road, and that unless patrons are assessed the extra penny, they will be obliged to reduce the wages of their employes.

TAKE BODY OF DR. DAY TO BROOKLYN

Second Funeral of Suicide Physician to Be Held at His Old Home.

"SLAIN," CRIES HIS WIDOW

Special to the Boston American.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Oct. 29.—The body of Dr. Albert Cushman Day, the assistant physician at the Boston City Hospital, who committed suicide in Boston last Saturday, arrives to-day at the home of Dr. Day's parents at No. 327 Pearl street.

A second funeral service will be held at the house and the body will be interred here. The first funeral service took place yesterday in Boston.

The body is brought here by Gustavus Wilson, brother-in-law of Dr. Day, who went to Boston to attend the Boston services and to attend to the details of having the body brought here.

The Boston services were conducted by the Rev. W. Sherman Thompson of Somerville, the same clergyman who only six days previous had secretly married Dr. Day to Miss Estelle Maude Callahan, the "Gibson Girl" nurse at Boston City Hospital.

The bereaved bride, who is now at the Day home here, is positive her husband did not kill himself, although the police accept suicide as the cause of death.

"I am confident," says Mrs. Day, "that he did not kill himself. My husband was the happiest man in the world when he left me Friday. He had only one trouble. That was on account of the rumor that we had eloped without marrying."

Mrs. Gustavus Wilson, sister of Dr. Day, also thinks the young doctor was not a suicide. This theory, shared by the young bride and by Mrs. Wilson, is being worked up by detectives, although the police reject it.

POLICE TRAILING FALSE KEY THIEVES

The police of the Joy street station are searching for one or more men who have been entering houses with false keys while the families were away, the last case being reported to-day by Jacob Greenberg of No. 7 Spring street, West End, who lost $200 worth of property, including watches, lockets and chains.

OSTRICH PLUMES of a Character

Very Seldom Underpriced Are Featured in a Sale at

About Half Price

Plumes of quality, unmatchable lustre and refinement supplied by one of America's leading importers and manufacturers.

Plumes of exceptionally high character—not the kind that is usually manufactured for sale purposes—beautiful, glossy blacks, long fibre and hard flues.

The fashion of Ostrich Plumes prevails more than ever this season and Boston women quickly appreciate the elegance and grace of good plumes.

We invite you to attend this sale today. It will be instructive in demonstrating the Siegel policy in selling plumes at a dry goods's profit instead of the exclusive millinery profit of 100 per cent.

LABOR NEWS

ALL NO. PRINTING TRADES LABEL UNION COUNCIL 96 KEY ON, MASS

The following has been sent out by the Press Committee of the striking bookbinders of Norwood, with the endorsement of the executive committee:

"That the strike situation in Norwood remains the same is a fact in spite of rumors to the contrary. The bookbinders are standing solidly together in their demand for the eight-hour day, and are encouraged by the outlook at present with ninety per cent of the bookbinders of the United States and Canada having made agreements with their employers for the eight-hour day, dating from October 1, on which date the general demand was made, or they have agreed upon other dates ranging from one to ten months.

Still, in only a few places has it been deemed necessary by employers signing the agreement to extend the dates granting th eight-hour day beyond October 1, and practically the entire force outside of Boston and Norwood are now enjoying the eight-hour day. Winn & Co. have for some time had a fifty-hour week and are making arrangements with the men for the forty-eight-hour week.

MAN'S BODY FOUND STABBED 9 TIMES

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—With a bomb and a loaded 38-calibre revolver concealed under the sweater next to the wearer's body, the corpse of an unknown man, bearing nine dagger wounds in the breast and shoulders, was found on the sidewalk early to-day in Noll street, between Central and Evergreen avenues, Brooklyn. The dead man was about twenty-seven years old.

PLAN TUNNEL OF 4 TRACKS IN PROVIDENCE

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 29.—The future imperative need of a four-track connection out of this city to accommodate the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad trains from Newport, Fall River or even Worcester, is emphasized by Vice-President E. E. Buckland of the Mellen road. Mr. Buckland declared that in addition to the two-track tunnel under College Hill, under construction at the present time, a second tunnel of similar accommodations, parallel to that now being built, will be required in a few years.

The intent of the New Haven road, as set forth by Mr. Buckland, is hailed here as a big step toward the securing of promised notice by Providence as the railroad centre of southeastern New England. The first tunnel will be completed New Year's day, 1909.

The purpose of the railroad was declared officially at a conference at City Hall yesterday between representatives of the corporation and the city government, when the matter of extension of time from the city to complete the work was discussed. A five-year extension of time is deemed probable by railroad men, as that to 1914 at least the consummation of the plan is not improbable.

Most of the Tangles of Married Life Are Caused by Jealousy

By Beatrice Fairfax

A PAIR of beautiful but too expressive eyes, a picture hat, a satin automobile coat, a pearl-handled umbrella, spangles and many other frills and fancies have brought much trouble in the Michael Lavelle family.

The trouble seems to be that Mrs. Lavelle is too pretty, and too fond of adorning her pretty self in pretty things, and that Mr. Lavelle, being addicted to jealousy to an extraordinary degree, cannot stand the strain.

There probably have been faults on both sides. Mr. Lavelle wished his pretty, young wife to wear nothing but black, and to look at no one but himself.

Mrs. Lavelle, being young, vivacious and pretty, naturally wearied of both occupations, and then the troubles began.

Attracted Attention

ACCORDING to all accounts the young woman was pretty enough to challenge the admiration of all men. It is more than probable that, knowing this, she was not able to resist the temptation of wielding her power.

Any husband has every right to demand that his wife should be a quiet, well-bred woman, but has he the right to dictate how she should dress?

Black is for the old and the sad, not for the young and happy, and there is not one woman in a thousand who is content to go perpetually clad in sun-like black.

If a woman dresses in too outrageously conspicuous a manner, her husband, of course, is quite right in objecting to her making a show of herself.

But as long as she is not too extravagant, and dresses reasonably, she ought to have the privilege of choosing her own wardrobe.

The very fact that she was so watched and restricted would be enough to make a woman of any spirit long to kick over the traces.

Fascinate Own Wife

If a woman has enough to her life to keep her busy and interested, she will not be thinking too much about her good looks and clothes.

If a husband wishes to keep her from looking at other men, let him make himself so fascinating to her that she won't be aware of the existence of other men.

The average man seems to think that when he establishes a wife in a comfortable home and gives her enough money to run it and to dress herself with, his duties are finished.

Having won her love, he makes but little effort to keep it.

A pretty girl gets a great deal of admiration and homage. Along comes some man who wooes her with desperate and unceasing fervor. Nothing is good enough for her. She is so pretty and so sweet that she is altogether lovable and desirable that he never tires telling her how wonderful she is.

Should Be Wooers

FINALLY, he wins her and they are married. She is just as pretty as ever, but who tells her that she is? Where are all the adulation and attention? The husband may love her even more than he did as a sweetheart, but he does not bother to tell her so.

She hears all the pretty compliments she has been accustomed to, and unless she has a pretty sound head on her pretty shoulders she is apt to seek elsewhere the admiration that is withheld by her husband.

Other men find her just as pretty as ever, and their eyes tell her so. Suddenly the husband awakens to the fact and the result is a jealous tempest.

A jealous man and a frivolous woman can manage to work up on a mere matrimonial tangle as one would wish to see.

Both, in the pity of it, that started out to be a happy marriage should go to pieces for such foolish cause.

NEW FUR COATS ARE OF ELABORATE DESIGN

THIS model, one of the smartest of the new long fur coats, is a sample of striking designs that will rule among the more expensive coats. Indeed, the tendency this Winter will be toward longer and fuller furs. A leading Boston dealer predicts the disappearance of the little neckpiece, so popular in recent years. Wraps must be long and full to be in style this season.

May Irwin Tells How to Be Happy at Home and Abroad

THE BOSTON AMERICAN to-day gives three rules for happiness. Follow them and you will know "how to be happy." The rules are prescribed by Miss May Irwin, the comedienne. They are home-made rules—a recipe for happiness which she has evolved out of the philosophy of a sunny disposition. In three instalments Miss Irwin has given to the BOSTON AMERICAN readers her views on happiness and how happiness may be attained. Here is the first of her series of articles:

By MAY IRWIN

ARTICLE NO. 1.—CONSCIENCE

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE keynote of happiness is a clear conscience.

One of the best ways I know of achieving a clear conscience is doing it to-day—well.

Then it necessarily follows that when we do the best by ourselves sincerely, we shall do the best we can by the fellow workers we meet day by day.

A clear conscience is the only means by which we can see the good in every human being—if we would only take the trouble to find it.

Now I have here written three of my primary beliefs in nothing the least original in achieving happiness.

These rules may sound like cheap platitudes. No matter how they sound or how their appear in type after I have written them, if you follow them you will inevitably wind up in a frame of mind which can be designated by no other term than absolute happiness.

"Intensely Serious"

SINCE the AMERICAN has called upon me for certain articles and I have accepted the commission, I wish to state at the outset that I AM INTENSELY SERIOUS.

I am known as a funny woman. For a number of years I have been known by an appellation which might not accord with my present role as an expounder of happiness in the newspapers and on the billboards I have been referred to as "Jolly May Irwin."

That brings me to one of the first points I wish to make.

Happiness is one thing, jollity is another. It is simply impossible for a person to be jolly without being happy.

And a person can be happy without being jolly.

Happiness begins at home. If the home life of a man or woman is one of a clear conscience there is happiness. Business cares pale when there is a happy home. Everything in the outer world goes wrong and there may be beset by a legion of troubles, but if the home life is right the troubles can only be considered as petty annoyances.

They Fight Happiness

THERE are a lot of people in this world who won't allow themselves to be happy. I have met them on and off the stage. Everywhere I have met them they are amusing. Now I will tell you why they are amusing.

It is because they are looking for sympathy. Sympathy is a grand calling, but the world could not get along without it and still be a world of sunshine.

But sympathy is not encouragement, and encouragement is the mental tonic required for the weak-hearted who are perpetually telling their troubles and waiting for you to tell them how sorry you are for their predicament.

I cannot stand for the everlasting sympathizer. Bless my soul, the real knockers of this grand, glorious, sunshiny old world are the sympathizers. They don't do a thing but put you deeper in the dumps. They make you feel like the strong hand of every man was turned against you.

Dodge the Sympathizer

TAKE a tip from me. Dodge the sympathizer. If you want help and are truly seeking happiness, go around the corner and find your real helping friend in the man who tells you sympathize, but will gently and firmly point out your mistake and without any note of condemnation assure you that he will go his limit to start you again on the right way.

Each one of you will then have found happiness to a very great degree.

Happiness is one great blanket. It shelters the world. It goes for everybody.

Happiness does consist of an artificial experiment which enables me to forget conscience. That remark is offered for the benefit of my women friends. It does not need any elucidation.

The spirit in which I wrote it turns my thoughts back to my belief that happiness always begins at home. Under no circumstances can she cannot be happy unless she has a home to which she may always look.

One Funny Thing

IT is quite possible that the readers of the AMERICAN will be a little surprised at my sincere seriousness in what I have written.

If I have lived up to my newspaper reputation I am very well aware that I should break into a coon song or tell a funny story. I have encountered but one funny thing recently and that has been since I went into vaudeville.

It was in Pittsburg. I was singing a song that I have sung in Chicago many nights in the past, the title of which is, "When You Ain't Got No Money You Needn't Come 'Round."

In the course of one of the verses of the song I have to use in dialect the word "onery." The manager of the theatre informed me after my first appearance, that the song was objectionable and that his patrons could never be affronted by the use of such a word as "onery."

Happening in Pittsburg that was to my mind an awful joke. My conscience was clear and the children did not make me unhappy although I must confess that I was amused professionally and that I changed the wording of my song.

If Pittsburg took exception to the word and was unhappy there, too, I am prone to believe that it was still a matter of conscience.

There is much happiness to be found in being of use to your friends.

In my next article I am going to tell you a few more things about the happiness that begins at home, and the happiness that may be forced to permeate a business office.

Timely Tips for Home Dressmakers

THE French seamstresses have many little tricks that make the work easier and finish it better than when done by our methods. One is to lay the lace on the material to be sewed on, and very narrow raw edge above the face. Use a fine needle and thread and sew it over and over toward you with a slanting stitch. This makes a tiny roll, which frons perfectly flat and holds securely.

Simplicity Needed

For the past few seasons fabrics have been subservient to trimmings, but the richness of the materials provided for this Autumn will change that and bring the decoration to secondary position. For this reason we are to have more simplicity, both in outline and in details, and much more attention will, therefore, be given to the cut.

A Queen Inspired Dress

A pretty way of arranging lace insertion for trimming a sheer dress or waist is to first prepared for a big party. The flounces accommodate the underdress as well as the with a sort of single box-pinted effect, through which a ribbon threads in and out of the heading, and the insertion, which has a very pretty edge to it, is finally gathered in waved lines, the ribbon, also gathered in the same way, passing under and over in exactly the reverse fashion, making the most charming interlacing. This idea was suggested by a portrait of Queen Charlotte, who, if one of the plainest women of her period, had some exceedingly handsome gowns.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

ACQUAINTANCE IS SLIGHT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl nineteen years old, and three weeks ago, at a surprise party, I met a young man whom at sight I fell in love with. He seemed to pay more attention to me than any other girl. He always called me for all games, and seemed anxious to be talking to me all the while. Sunday I met him, and he seemed so glad to see me. But I had not seen him since to call. Had I a right to ask him? Now, I am going to a party, and have no friend to go with. Would it be ladylike for me to ask him to come with me, I being told I could bring a friend? Please let me know what to do.

M. L.

YES, you might have asked him to call, as he seemed so glad to see you. I hardly think that you know him well enough to ask him to take you to a party. If you know the hostess very well you might ask her for an invitation for him, and get him back then he probably would ask you to go with him.

LET HIM GO

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty years old and have been keeping company with a young man of twenty-two for the past seventeen months, in which time I learned to love him very dearly indeed. Two weeks ago he made an engagement with me, but failed to keep it. He called on me later and told me that his parents did not like him to go out with any one, and that we had better part. Now, dear Miss Fairfax, as he has often told me that he loved me, and it will break my heart to part with him, what would you advise me to do?

THERE is nothing to do but let him go.

His parents probably are not to blame. I think that he is a feeble young man and not worth fretting over. I do not think that it is worth your while to try and get him back.

THE TURN OF THE BALANCE

A Thrilling Romance of American Life---By Brand Whitlock

CHAPTER XVI.—Continued

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

DURING the eleven months he spent in the penitentiary he had tried to keep these resolutions fresh, strong and ever clear before him.

This was a difficult thing to do, for his mind was weakened by the confinement, and his moral sense was constantly clouded by the examples that were placed before him.

On Sundays in the chapel he heard the chaplain preach, but during the week the guards stole the words he had sent home to him before she died, the contractors and the prison officials were grafting and stealing from the State provisions, household furniture, liquors, wines, and every other sort of thing, one of the prison officials supplied his brother's drug store with medicines and surgical appliances from the prison hospital.

Besides all of the punishments he was compelled at times to witness—the whipping post, the electric battery, the strapping down of the convicts to mention but a few—the miseries of the convicts themselves were such that his conscience would be abandoned with terror last his reason should go.

But all these things he felt, would be of an evil hour, and keep his reason and his health, and live to the end of his term. Then he could leave them all behind and go out into the world and begin life anew.

Hunts for Work

Graves came back to town during these last glorious days of the Autumn, and the fact that he had no place to go was not so from the thoughts that had harassed him much a hardship. He did not care to show himself to his old friends until he had an opportunity to procure new clothes, and he felt that he was started on the way to this rehabilitation when almost immediately he found a place tracking the merchandise for a wholesale house in Front street.

He felt encouraged; his luck, he told himself, was good, and for three days he was happy in his work. Then, one morning, he noticed a policeman. The policeman stood on the sidewalk watching Graves roll barrels down the slide from a truck.

The policeman stood there a good while, and then he spoke to the driver, adjusted the magnificent horse that were hitched to the truck, patted their glossy necks, picked up a cigar stub and lighted it, took from a horse barrel and let the horses graze there for a while, and left the place.

The horses loosed their heads playfully as they did this, and, meanwhile, the policeman glanced over four squares, reckoning Graves.

Presently he went into the wholesale house, and through the window Graves saw him talking to the proprietor. Then the manager paid Graves for his three days' work and discharged him.

On this money, four dollars and a half, Graves lived for a week, and then began looking another job.

He could do nothing except unskilled labor, for he was poorly clothed for any clerical employment. He walked along the river front, seeking for work on the wharves as a stevedore, but no one could get there who was not a member of the Longshoremen's Union, and no one could be a member of the Long shoremen's Union who did not work there; and this plan failed.

He visited employment bureaus, but these demanded fees and deposits. Graves read the want advertisements in the newspapers, but none of those availed him; each promised employment only after preliminary which Graves could not give.

CHAPTER XVII.

SEATED in the library at the Wards, Judge Ward was explaining to the influences of the moment.

The open fire gave off the faint delicious odor of burning wood, and the lamp filled the room with a soft light that gleamed on the gilt lettering of the books about the walls, the pictures above the low shelves—a portrait of Browning among them—kept to the room the dignity of the great souls they portrayed.

Eaton, who had just tried his second murder case, was glad to find this refuge from the thoughts that had harassed him all day long. Elizabeth noticed the weariness in his eyes, and she had a notion that her husband's little more grayly at his temples.

"You've been going through an ordeal this week, haven't you?" She had expressed the thought that lay on their minds.

He felt a thrill. She sympathized, and this was comfort; this was what he wanted.

"It must have been exciting," Elizabeth continued. "Murder trials usually are, I believe. I never saw one; I never was in a courtroom in my life. Women do go, I suppose?"

A Marked Man

The snow storm brought him a prosperity as fleeting as the snow itself; he was soon in the residence district where as yet he had not had the heart to go because of the memories that haunted it—and cleaned the sidewalks of the well-to-do. After a day or so the sidewalks of the well-to-do were all cleaned—that is, the sidewalks of those who respected the law sufficient to have the sidewalks cleaned.

Then the rain came, and Graves tramped the sloppy streets. His prison-made shoes soon let the inches to water as paper, which substance, indeed, they were made; he contracted a cold, and his cough grew rapidly worse. He got a place to sleep for it. He spent a night in each of the two lodging houses in the city, then he whipped out on the door of the police station.

This was no new experience to him, because he visited with vermin, though this was no new experience to him after eleven months in the cells of the penitentiary. Meanwhile he had little to eat.

Once or twice he visited hotel kitchens and the chefs gave him scraps from the table; then he did what for days he had been dreading—he tried to beg. After following twenty people to go by, he found the courage to hold out his hand to the twenty-first; the man passed without noticing him; a dozen others did likewise. Then a policeman saw him and arrested him on a charge of vagrancy.

At the police station the officers, recognizing his prison clothes, held him for three days as a suspicious character. Then he was arraigned before Bostwick, who scowled and told him he would give him twenty-four hours in which to leave the city.

It was now cold. The wind cut through Graves's clothing like a saw; he shuddered and hid—two days; then, intolerably among them—lost to the room the dignity hungry, ——

HEALTH MUFFINS

Four cups of bran, two cups of whole wheat, one teaspoon of salt. Mix dry ingredients together. Add one-half cup molasses and enough sour milk. Bake in moderate oven. Excellent for stomach and bowels.

MRS. LYMAN G. TAYLOR.
No. 64 Pearl street, Hingham.

CHOCOLATE SYRUP

Sugar two cups, water one-half cup, cocoa two heaping teaspoons, extract vanilla one teaspoon. Mix the cocoa with the sugar, add the water, bring to a boil and boil five minutes. When cool add the vanilla. This syrup is used for college ices, as a flavor for ice cream, or may be used in cakes or fudge. One part syrup and three parts heavy cream whipped together make a most elegant filling for chocolate cake.

ARBUTUS G. BIXBY.
No. 314 Bunker Hill street, Boston.

GREEN TOMATO MINCE PIE

Grind or chop fine four quarts of green tomatoes. Drain off the juice, cover with cold water and scald eight minutes, then drain well. Add two pounds brown sugar, one pound seeded raisins, one-half pound citron, one-half pound candied orange or lemon peel, one teaspoon each suet, one-half cup cider vinegar, one tablespoon each of cinnamon, cloves and allspice, one tablespoon salt. When cold add one teaspoon ground clove, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon nutmeg. Stir thoroughly and put in jars.

MRS. OSCAR B. BATES.
No. 173 Highland street, Chelsea.

HALF-HOUR PUDDING

Beat four tablespoons of butter to a cream with one-half pint of powdered sugar; add yolks of three eggs, beating thoroughly, then a rounded half cupful corn meal, and the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Mix well and bake in a pudding dish, well buttered. Serve hot with sauce.

How to Take Care of Pearls

THEY should be worn constantly to preserve their lustre.

Put away in a jewel box they become yellow and dead looking.

They should never be put in hot water and never come in contact with grease.

Clean them with soft linen handkerchief, dampened with moistening of my soap.

Afterward rub them up to a polish with a piece of soft, dry chamois.

When putting away wrap them in jewelers' cotton to preserve their color.

Never keep in a box lined with colored silk or satin. They may absorb the color and become stained.

If cracked or broken they can be mended so cleverly that the flaw will never be seen.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL

BY THE PROFESSOR.

THERE are a few essentials to beauty which cannot well be overlooked except with fatal results.

In the first place no one with ill-health can be beautiful. She may look pale and interesting, which some novelists would have us believe attractive, but she cannot hold a candle to the girl who is brimming over with spirits which she has acquired through perfect health. A red, happy, clear, smooth skin, with the red blood of health showing through, is a picture for a king.

A girl who possesses this charm can make herself beautiful in spite of plain features, unless there be actual deformity.

Another necessity to beauty is an equally nice quality of surface, but cleanliness and good care will prevent the existence of pores. Add to these carriage, and well-kept nails and a good manicure, and what more is needed to make a woman beautiful?

Just a little care and thoughtfulness, girls, and you can all have this much-coveted possession.

FORM NEW HABIT

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I have very long and thick hair, but it is very poor on the temples and all broken. If I wish to wear it in its parted in the center and braided in one braid.

MESSAGE the temples every night well with red vaseline and this will probably increase the growth of the hair there. The hair should be braided only when parted in the centre, and braided in one braid.

SCARS FROM BLACKHEADS

DEAR PROFESSOR:

I have a slight left from picking black heads from my face. I think the best would be to get rid of the new some time ago I formula for peeling the skin. Kindly publish it for me.

MRS. H. J. R.

DO not think of using anything so severe as to peel the skin from the face to remove the blemishes left from blackheads. Bathe the scars with olive oil two or three times a day and they will gradually disappear. The lotions that contain corrosive sublimate in small quantities are very good for getting rid of very deep tan, sunburn or freckles, but for the scars, do not attempt it.

FOR WEAK VOICE

DEAR PROFESSOR:

Can you tell me how I can do to get a strong voice? I'm often short on breath, too, when I sing. Also what's good for sore throat?

ELIZA.

YES, proper breathing exercises will give you strong lung power. In the first place, hold the chest high muscularly so that the lungs do not have the cavity formed for raising the bony framework of the chest in addition to their regular functions. In breathing push out the abdomen. This will cause the ribs to expand to the fullest extent. In exhaling, hold this diaphragm strong and let the breath out as slowly as possible. This gives you good breath control, which is the secret of power in the voice. In exhaling during this exercise hold the breath pushed up against the throat while the pressure of the diaphragm grows stronger and stronger until you are obliged to let it out; then do so with the lips arranged as for whistling, letting it out with great pressure. This cleanses out the upper part of the lungs and gives power to the throat muscles. Practice at this until you can hold your breath at this pressure for a time double that which you can now, and you will find your voice not only much stronger but more steady—one of the great needs of the singer. This breathing will also do more toward relieving the clogged throat than anything else.

TOMORROW'S BEST BARGAINS IN BOSTON'S BIG STORES

SHEPARD NORWELL CO. will sell one lot of men's gray and black silk lisle hose, with high spliced heel and double sole. These hose regularly sell at 25 cents a pair, but will be reduced for one day's sale to three pairs for $1.

JAMES A. HOUSTON CO. will have on sale, in their infants' wear department, children's hand knit pants drawers with feet—the regular 75-cent kind—for 50 cents a pair.

MacDONNELL'S TREMONT TEMPLE store will show a fine line of flannelette goods at a special for Wednesday. They will sell a lot of striped gowns, in blue and pink, at only 79 cents each. These gowns are made full width and size and are reasonable in price.

HUTCHINS CO. WILL offer for to-morrow a stamped pillow top and back, reduced from 25 cents to 10 cents. The top is of the best grade of art ticking, stamped with a green dragon. Floss embroidery instructions go with every pillow.

HOUGHTON & DUTTON CO. will sell to-morrow corsets made by the New England and Empire companies. These corsets are made of coutil and batiste, are blue gored and princess shapes, with bone supporters attached front and sides. They are marked down for this day only to 45 cents.

HENRY SIEGEL CO. WILL place on sale for 50 cents for one day a lot of children's Balbriggan drawers, the kind that regularly sell for 79 cents. These fine drawers are made in sizes from two to five years and are made in both the French and Russian styles.

AT BAILEY'S RUBBER Store, on Boylston street, will be found a small lot of drummers' samples in women's and misses' rubbers. These coats are heavy weight, just the thing for school and street wear. They are worth from $22 to $25, but are now reduced to $12.

BUTLER'S WILL SELL regular $1.15 tan kid gloves to-morrow for 75 cents a pair. They are the two-clasp kind, and can be had in all sizes.

GILCHRIST CO. WILL offer for to-morrow a lot of $5 white and ecru net waists for $2.98. These waists are made over silk lining, with square yoke of Valenciennes lace, finished with wide bands of clunny lace. There are also bands of clunny lace around the body of waist. The sleeves are three-quarter length, trimmed with cuffs, and the collar and yoke are finished neat, edged with lace.

WOLF'S "MY CLOTHIER" WILL SELL women's dressing sacques at 29 cents that are really worth 39 cents, made from good flannel, in dainty pink and blue effects. They will be found in the underwear department on the second floor.

JORDAN MARSH CO. WILL SELL in the basement sweeping-length floor canes, made of the best heavy rib. They have the dark Japan finish and are marked "Floor." These canes have a strong hinged cover and have never sold for less than $1.25, but will sell to-morrow only for 69 cents.

Is It on Straight? There's a Reason

THE smartly gowned woman knows a full well the value of the poise, loose as the plant her hat on the head and stick a pin in carelessly?

And she knows for the best of reasons that adjusting the hat is a matter that deserves study and which must be done with care.

That every hat is capable of a poise.

That unless it is poised rightly it will not be becoming. It is graceful and becoming if it is poised well, and most ungraceful if badly poised.

That it must be set carefully on the coiffure and the hair must be pulled down in front to show some of its big soft waves.

That the side should be puffed out a little and the back hair receive attention.

As for the hat, that it requires pinning, and that the pins must never be placed in carelessly.

That each pin should show and become a part of the color scheme.

And that is the reason she always must know whether her hat is "on straight."

RED HOTTEST MELODRAMA, "THE RANGER"

Bang! Bang!
Bang! Bang! Bang! And then some.

If's the one best bet that the stage of the Hollis Street Theatre presents for many remains of blank cartridges in its life so it did when the stage hands came in to "do" sweep up after the first night of Dustin Farnum and "The Ranger."

Such a shooting! They stood up one poor fellow in the first five minutes or so, and how him full of holes at the Ranger's order. The Ranger was a man of real quick action. When the false villain told him the man he had ordered shot was the brother of the girl he loved, the Ranger used so badly that he used to talk to the Arizona stars about her — was a beautiful proposal with a mad yearning upon him outside the wall, ready to blow up the besieged Americans with dynamite — well, when the villain told the Ranger that the man shot in the first act was the girl's long lost brother, then the Ranger felt just awful, he did.

The villain, who stopped at nothing, also let it be known that the Ranger had played the very dickens with a poor little Mexican maiden — another lie's girl, you see — and also the fuller ordered him clothes the Ranger's get did, at the villain got his, of course. He was stabbed by the Mexican girl's father. And there were two sets of disappointed fights, and — to wind the shutterfest up with a grand finale, a few more posses were stood up against a wall, the wings, and shot by a firing squad, as indicated in stage direction.

All in all, "The Ranger" is the red hottest melodrama that ever hit the Hollis Street Theatre, so far as we recall. It seems a shame to have wasted all such setting under the simple name of "The Ranger," when it might have been called "Ho Grande Rustlers, or Who Dunnit."

THREE PLAYS STAY ANOTHER WEEK

Under ordinary circumstances this would have been the last week of the engagement of Marie Dare in "The Morals of Marcus," at the Park Theatre, but on account of the unusual interest that has been aroused in it, Charles Frohman has added another fortnight to the limit here. The piece will rank among the most interesting of all the productions which the Park Theatre has given for a long time.

Boston likes things that are just a bit Parisian in nature, and that is why there is so great popularity for the engagement of Anna Held at the Colonial Theatre. The very title of the piece is fetching and it is quite in harmony with the nature of the production. Miss Held knows how to suit her a production that is as rapid as a ride in an automobile. This is the second week here, with a special matinee to-morrow.

The popularity of "Sky Farm" was again clearly demonstrated by big audiences at the Boston Theatre last evening when this play began its third week of its engagement by the Boston Theatre stock company. The excellent work of the vocal quartet has made its members very popular. On Monday, November 4, the long promised production of the English melodrama, "The Soudan," will be made.

BEST WORK OF YEAR IS "FAUST"

"Faust," that ever popular opera, with Miss Helena Nolth in the role of Marguerite and Francis J. Boyle as the Mephisto, drew a great house to the Castle Square last evening, and the audience was given the finest performance of the season. Miss Nolth's singing in the title role was tractive. Marguerite, and her singing in the "Jewel Song" was heard to great advantage. as is true of Mr. Boyle, although his forte is not altogether in the music last evening. Mr. Murray was the ideal Valentine, Miss Hanson the Siebel and Mr. Tallman the Faust. During the week Mr. Davies will alternate with Mr. Tallman, Miss Hanson with Miss Nolth, Mr. Hoff with Mr. Murray, and Miss Lane with Miss Nolth. Wednesday next week will be Wagner's "Lohengrin."

Howard Athenaeum

A merry band of rollicking girls, the leading member being Anna Seymour, the old Howard yesterday in a genuine laughing entertainment. Telephone." In the olio were Alice Fowler and Minnie Harrison, songbirds; Lester and Moore, in a lunch sketch; Emmet Krause and Lester Rice in a Southern novelty styled "Cotton Blossoms"; Ollie Young and Alice Warren had a pleasing sketch. In the Howard's added features were Thomas Thorn and company in "Out All Night," Rowland and Hughes in "The Hard Messenger Boy," Ida Zarges on the flying rings, A mysterious novelty was offered by Adams and Mack, and Russell and Russell entertained with songs and funny steps. Marie de Rossett showed her skill as a firearms manipulator. Josie Sheridan — the girl in black — sang several coon songs, "The Son of Your Daddy," and "You Were an Old Friend of Mine." Other contributors were Ward and Hamilton, humorists, and Joe Daniels.

PICTURES AT THE HUB.

Brevity is the soul of wit and a busy people have not the time to wade through a long story of criticism, so with regard to this week's bill at the Hub Theatre it can be said to be a little better and a little more than can be obtained elsewhere for a very small price. The song program contains some new, catchy, up-to-date ballads.

STARS IN LEADING PLAYS

Dustin Farnum and Mary Boland in "The Rangers," at the Hollis, and Truly Shattuck as "The Lady from Lane's," at the Majestic, are features here this week.

BUSY WEEK IN BOSTON'S VARIETY HOUSES

Tremont Theatre

Whoever picked out Harry Carson Clark and his company in "Strategy" as features in Keith-Proctor vaudeville must have had a grudge against said "A. V." It is about as inane a sketch, and about as boresome, as it is one misfortune to see in a high class vaudeville house. Aside from this, the bill this week in the Tremont is strong and interesting. May Belfort is also instantly popular and the audience forced a change of plans by insisting upon her singing a dainty Parisian song, after the next act had been announced. She should stimulate "Experience" however, if is too old. The Romany Operatic Company is the big hit of the bill, with some remarkably fine singers, well costumed. The London Five Bridgets is held over this week. Mme. Etolie's society circus horses, George W. Day, in blackface monologue, Charles E. Evans as the musical burglar, Mlle. Emmy's fox terriers, and Dolmore and Lee on the revolving ladder complete the bill, with the exception of Charles Reeves on the street fakir, an unusually clever impersonation, but with some "raw" lines that should be cut out. Frequent repetition of them adds to their vulgarity.

Palace Theatre

There are five companies in the burlesque field this week this week achieved the success of Pull Sheridan's City Sports. They present two laughable burlesques entitled "The Mikado's Harem" and "A Terrible Affair." The principal comedy roles are cared for by Barrie Thompson, William Fuller, Arthur Flynn, Jack Barrett, Dick Brown and Tom Humphreys, while Annie Mitchell, Estelle Burnham, Anna Sempster, Anna Chandler and Miss Stanley lead the big chorus of pretty and talented girls. The olio presents Dick Brown, entertainer; Thompson and Carter, in "Mr. Wise's Brother"; Willie Smith Bartelli, dancer, and her bell ballet; Anna Chandler, in ballads; the Gothic City Quartet, and the Five Salvages, Parisian dancers. The Palace company presents Dakata, fancy ride shot; Howard and Cameron, comedy sketch team; Guertin and Richardson, champion jumpers; the Cannons, comedy sketch pair, and the Palacescope.

Lyceum Theatre

With the Behman show, which opened yesterday, is combined Frank L. Bryan's "Congress of American Girls," the olio making a stage gathering of over sixty seasoning young women, handsomely costumed. The olio presented Frank and Martin Moore in "The Singing Bell Boy and the Acrobatic Maid"; Ned Dandy, Hebrew impersonator, and his Hebrew Four, songs with illustrated views. James C. Morton and Frank Moore, as Sherlock Holmes and Dr. Watson are a team worth seeing. Mollie Williams as Anna Held is also entertaining, and Mark Bennett impersonates Oscar Hammerstein. The comedy burlesque is entitled "Hey Diddle Diddle," and Pete Curley as McSweeney, the good man, is the most laughable character imaginable. The boy in the flower box is also good. The burlesque concludes with a lively exhibition of Captain Jacob Fox's Zouaves.

Keith's Theatre

With "The Song Birds," a travesty on the New York grand opera war, holding over from last week, and with Will M. Cressy and Blanche Dayne presenting "The Wyoming Widow," illustrating the vicissitudes of newspaper making in the far West, the bill at Keith's this week is making a hit. But aside from them there is a pantomime by four-footed actors, mostly dogs, who present a village scene of toilet and humor such as to set the audience singing a dainty Parisian song, after the next act had been announced. She should stimulate "Experience" however, if is too old. The Romany Operatic Company is the big hit of the bill, with some remarkably fine singers, well costumed. The London Five Bridgets is held over this week. Mme. Etolie's society circus horses, George W. Day, in blackface monologue, Charles E. Evans as the musical burglar, Mlle. Emmy's fox terriers, and Dolmore and Lee on the revolving ladder complete the bill, with the exception of Charles Reeves on the street fakir, an unusually clever impersonation, but with some "raw" lines that should be cut out. Frequent repetition of them adds to their vulgarity.

Columbia Theatre

"A burlesque ecstasy" is the term that best describes the splendid show given by the Gay Torradors at the Columbia but night, when Olga Orloff, Billy Cook, Bonny Harris, Al Bruce, Nettie Hyde and Mildred Vaniece led a carnival of riotous fun. Miss Olga Orloff, the singing queen, was in exceptional voice. Her solo "Neath the Old Cherry Tree, Sweet Marie," was the biggest applause winner of the night. By far the most pleasing act in the olio was the xylophone playing of Garden and Summers, which fairly carried the house by storm.

Orpheum Theatre

Maggie Cline—the same old Maggie—is the individual hit of the Orpheum show the present week. There are a number of acts new to Boston, but Maggie is the one best bet. She presents a number of new songs, but the ever popular "Throw Him Down McCluskey" is the most popular of her numbers and with the accession of the "cupes" it went just as well as in the old days. Larry Larcos Co. presented a unique character comedy sketch. "The Fascinating Miss Dane" is the fun goes fast and furious with a stirring finish. Bond, Benton and Company divide honors in the comedy line. Their act, "Handkerchief Nonsense," is full of laughs. The time-honored mother-in-law furnishing the nucleus of the embarrassing situations and furnishing comedy. Cooper and Robinson, colored comedians, proved just as popular as ever. Emily Darrell and Chester and Jones present a new singing and dancing act, introducing some good dancing, and the Dundein troupe of excellent acrobats close the bill.

Austin & Stone's Museum

Lovers of things Oriental rallied at Austin & Stone's Museum yesterday to see the "Dance of Veils in the Orient" tastefully done by Princess Lailah, the cyclonic dancer of pleasant memory, and El Abrelo, in whirling and toe spinning, with twenty other girls, warriors, devilets, gamuts and magic women and sorcerers. Also in the curio hall Prof. Bamford and Girl exhibit magic and the last act of the show, and the finest of snakes, while in the theatre were the Dalys, Stone and Winchell, Comedy Company, Patchen and Clifford.

HERE, AT LAST, IS A SENSIBLE MUSICAL SHOW

Hist!
Here's a secret!
If you want to make a thoroughly satisfactory musical comedy, take a very successful farce and put music into it. Add a dash of swishy skirts, a few ladies in some snappy songs, and there you have a fine musical comedy.

This is what Broadhurst and Currie have done in "The Lady From Lane's" which, in its primeval state was the very farce called "The Wrong Mr. Wright." It is a big, full grown laughable farce, and ought to pass the Majestic in the doors. Truly Vic and Truly Shattuck, Sydney Jarvis, Jim Hawley and Adele Mather are the principals and they are the life of the piece, also a really good singing chorus. There are four of the dearest little curly haired children in it, here Mary Miles Minter sings "You're All the World to Me" until the audience is tired singing, and Miss Hawley's "Rosita" caused a halt in the progress of the play until she had repeated it half a dozen times.

There is no distraction in this musical comedy—a story that can be remembered and this, with the catchy songs, the good singing and the fun that is given to the work make it the most satisfactory musical piece the Majestic stage has held this year. Whoever picked out the costumes however, should be fired tipping, and Miss Hawley's "Rosita" caused a halt in the progress of the play until she had repeated it half a dozen times.

'THE SPOILERS' IS A HIT AT GLOBE

Love and gun-play follow one another in pleasing confusion on the Globe Theatre stage this week. "The Spoilers," an adaption by James MacArthur from Rex Beach's famous novel of the same name, is the production. Charles E. Blaney is the "man behind," being the author of the gun-play mixture.

There are four acts, and four sets crammed more full of hilarious action have never been seen. There are problements and paradoxes, too—all sorts of them.

The story is of the golden North and the people living there. Most of its hidden treasure. The scenes are well presented. Helen Gray, in the role of Helen Chester, the heroine, were the best heard at last evening's performance. Walter Law, as Roy Glenister, plays his part well. The stage settings are particularly good.

BETTER TO SELL RIBBONS THAN TO SUFFER AS ACTRESS

O, Maynie, it was awful! If "The Life of an Actress" is half as bad as I saw it at the Grand Opera House last night, I'll never go back to the ribbon counter. Just the same, if I was sure that handsome Jeff Fairfield would rescue me from the dark villain as he did Mary Melrose at the end of every act, I believe I'd try it. For he was simply grand.

But I wouldn't want to be accused for a minute I'd never done, like Mary Melrose was. I never could of stood for that. The way they admired that poor girl was awful, and if Hilton, whose life had been ruined by Harold Hilton, had not seen Nan Warrington when she made it the fatal blow, there is no telling what might have happened to Mary. But luckily she was left behind the curtains and saw it all.

Nan hasn't yet heard about it? My! You must be dying to know about it. Why you grand. You see, Mary Melrose is a country girl who wants to go on the stage. Her parents were afraid of it, and so Jeff Fairfield, the village telegraph operator, feared it would take her away from him. And then two bad men children however, spoke to her, and in a short time she made a hit, and the papers said nice things about her.

Now, Mary was as pretty as she could be, and Hilton—that was the villain—tried to make up to her. But she wouldn't have him, and told him so. Then he determined she would be his, and he asked Nan Warrington, an unscrupulous woman of the stage, to help him. She said she would, and together these two plotted her ruin.

Nan tried to make up to Mary in the first place by throwing bouquets at her. "Mr. ain't it a pity you have to play with you, with such a fair child," she said, when Mary was flying up on the stage in a fine rage. Then she became fast. Which is all right, although Mary mistrusted her somewhat.

Nan told her what a fine fellow Hilton was, and one night Hilton tried to go into Mary's dressing room with her. But she wouldn't have him either. She got him a piece of her mind and slammed the door in his face.

Maybe he wasn't mad. And just as he was passing Nan's dressing room the villain, loots and all, with a tiny bunch of violets in her hand. When she came from the stage door, Hilton not paying any notice to Jeff, tried to speak to her. But Jeff just knocked him down. Then, as if nothing had happened, he gave her the flowers.

"I brought you a bunch of violets," he said. And when she thanked him, you should have seen the look.

From that time on Mary had an awful time. She was exposed the detectives, who tried to be in league with Hilton, and had not Jeff got away because Jeff had a revolver and a pistol. At last Hilton got her locked in the river. He gave her candee between him and the gallows. "I'll save you, my darling," he said, "if you accept your offer, but I am as innocent as a babe unborn." You should of heard the way Nan would carry her up to a row.

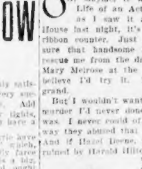
Well, while he had a long time before he had loved Hilton, and he had shook her. But now that he was dead, he killed Temple, and knew Mary was innocent. "It's a long story, but I'll tell you by and by," she said to Hilton. "And now I'm going to make you pay for my wrecked life." Then she told Hilton that Temple choked her until she was insensible, and then he threw her in the river. That would carry her up to a row.

Well, the row going awful fast, and her lifeless body kept getting closer and closer to it. I screamed. I could of screamed. But just then Jeff ran on the stage and threw a stick of dynamite into the mill. The machinery crashed, and Hazel was saved. Then he tackled Hilton, while Mary ran away. The villain's power just went wild.

The next act was the last, and there Nan and Mary came face to face. "This is the last night of the old year," said Mary. "Before midnight the world shall know which one of us is guilty." Nan laughed at her, because she did not know anyone had seen her when she stooped down to pick. But while they were chewing the rag, in came Hazel Deane and the detectives, and Nan was out in handcuffs.

Well, this was swell, except that some of the actors sang some lively songs. Mary Melrose, who, when she is off the stage, is Ida Glenn, sang beautiful.

It all came out right in the end, and I was awful glad of it. But if every lady actor has to go through all that poor Mary Melrose did, I don't want none of it for mine.



Could She Refuse?

"FAUST" UNUSUALLY WELL PRESENTED

Yesterday at the Bowdoin Square Theatre, the most notable drama of the season was presented. "Faust" has long held a warm place in the hearts of Bostonians. Special mention should be made of the elaborate dresses worn and the superb scenical effects in connection with the many famous scenes. Charlotte Hunt never played a part to which she seemed so well adapted as that of Marguerite. Clayton Legge as Mephisto was very good, while the acting of Louis Bressen as "Faust" was highly commendable. The acting of Edwin Dennison as Valentine was unsurpassed by its lights and shadows. The "Dame Martha" character of Florence Hale was another artistic feature. All the others in the cast did exceptionally well.

RIVAL NAVY BOXERS FIGHT TO A DRAW

Champion Altieri Not in Condition for Bout With Schlossberg of the New Jersey.

Although in poor condition through lack of training Walter Altieri of the battleship Missouri and champion of the navy, fought ten rounds to a draw on the New Jersey with Phil Schlossberg of the New Jersey.

At the navy yard Altieri had evidently underestimated his opponent, for he had paid little attention towards getting into shape and said he had not trained in two months. But his quickness on his feet and clever side stepping helped him out of several bad places.

Schlossberg tipped the scales at 178, ten pounds more than the Italian. He was also three inches taller and had a much longer reach.

Midshipman Norton of the Vermont was referee, and the bout started at 10:20.

Schlossberg began with a rush and looked like a sure winner. But Altieri didn't lose his head, and side-stepped his rival's fierce rushes cleverly.

In the fifth Altieri landed hard on Schlossberg's right eye, sending him to the floor.

The seventh round was a corker. First Altieri was knocked down, then in a minute he sent the New Jersey boxer down with a broken nose.

The remaining rounds were even and the verdict of a draw was applauded.

Altieri said he wanted to meet Schlossberg again and he was confident of beating him with proper training.

Two colored lightweights, Watson of the battleship New Jersey and Regan of Boston furnished a preliminary, which went four rounds. Watson was awarded the winner, and the decision was a popular one.

Two welterweight Boston athletic association boxers, William Hendbury, welterweight, and Will McKinnon, heavyweight champion, gave a lively and pretty exhibition, going four rounds, every minute of which there was something doing.

An eight-round bout between Seamen Bowden of the battleship Vermont and Lesinsky of the battleship New Jersey was the fourth and semi-final. Bowden was counted out in the third round, but after a rest the bout was continued to the limit, and Lesinsky was awarded the decision and the good watch prize for the event.

Fully 1,500 persons witnessed the bouts, many women folks being interested spectators and cheering their favorites.

The events took place on the big, roomy forecastle deck, and owing to the cold and also for privacy sake, the entire forward part of the ship had been canvas covered, making a fine ring inside pavilion.

A large number of the officers of the yard and ships were present during the tournament. The New Jersey's band furnished a concert program between bouts. A beautiful lunch of sandwiches and coffee was served to the visitors about 9.

BOXERS WHO FOUGHT FOR NAVY CHAMPIONSHIP.

WALTER ALTIERI. PHIL SCHLOSSBERG.

Altieri and Schlossberg met on the battleship New Jersey at the Charlestown Navy Yard. After ten lively rounds the bout was declared a draw.

ARMY COACH MADE HARVARD MEN HUSTLE

Lieutenant Graves Will Prove Big Aid to Harvard Eleven This Week.

Harvard football admirers are glad to learn that Lieutenant Ebenet Graves is to help Coach Crane get his kickers in shape for the Brown game in the Stadium Saturday.

Lieutenant Graves was one of the best tackles in the country at the time when he played on the Academy eleven. He was on the team for four years, being captain two years ago and acting as coach last year.

He was a friend of Charley Daly at the Academy, and the latter prevailed on him to come up to Cambridge and devote a week to giving the Harvard line men a few points on the way to play their positions. His assistance in the team will be invaluable.

Graves at once proceeded to put the line through some stiffest breaking and blocking drill that the men have received for some time.

He will be with the team for a week, and during that time will proceed to give them all sorts of drill and pointers that will help develop a good eleven.

Lieutenant Graves got into the game himself, and instead of driving the men through a hard drill, as most of the coaches on the Harvard team have been doing, he got right in with them and led them to the hardest practice that they will see for some time. Before the practice he, with the other coaches, gave the men a talk in the locker building for twenty minutes.

Newhall Expected Back.

It is expected that Mort Newhall will be back in the game again this afternoon, and Lockwood and Bird will probably be sufficiently recovered from their injuries to play on Saturday against Brown. If they are called upon to go in.

Coach Crane announced definitely that neither Mason nor Brennan, two of the most promising candidates for fullback, would be able to play again this season. That leaves but a few fullbacks for the Crimson, as the stock of good fullbacks is steadily diminishing. If anything happens to Apollonio, and Wendell fails to get off probation, the Crimson will be up against it.

There was no scrimmage yesterday, as Dennis refused to allow the field to be torn up in its very soft condition, and the practice was devoted to working on the individual play of the men.

This afternoon the practice will probably be long and hard. The men will be worked out in a scrimmage after he is polished off a bit in the preliminary practice. This will be out again and Graves will spend a lot of time working with him.

GLOVER GETS DRAW IN BOUT WITH DESHLER

Has Dave Deshler gone back or is Billy Glover, the South Boston scrapper, to be considered among the top lightweights in the city?

Anyway, they went twelve rounds to a draw at the Cooper A. C. meeting, at least that was the calling at the end of the twelve-round route, and there were so many differences of opinion when the mill was over that a draw was about the most satisfactory decision that could be rendered.

Deshler led for half a dozen rounds, then Glover came stronger and evened up the score by some excellent work. Deshler finished in the better form, as Glover was plainly worked from the fast pace Deshler led him from the start.

In two respects Deshler easily stood in front. He did most of the leading from start to finish and showed more cleverness in blocking and shiftiness of action. Glover waited for Deshler to come to him, and depended on extracting him shooting short punches or scoring on the counter.

Glover's attempts at leading were decidedly amateurish, but this could be attributed to the experienced chapter he was up against.

Deshler Smashed to Body.

Deshler did the most execution in body work, and several times smashed to the wind and had Glover hugging. Glover succeeded in catching Deshler coming to him with sheer right hooks to the head, and in the seventh with Deshler's ear and tried to make a mark of it for the rest of the journey.

Deshler's exhibition was decidedly more classy and he worked with Glover with the use of his left, getting some steamy stabs over that sent Glover's head back as if on a hinge. Glover took good care to keep his jaw covered, and was constantly pulling out of range, very much to the relief of force out of his delivery. Neither boy was in distress at any part of the bout, as they had no haymakers to offer, depending on jabbing and short arm jolts to the body and head. Deshler injured his right at the finish of the mix, and this hampered with the further use of it.

Glover showed improvement over his last seen in the Hub, and his Gotham trip evidently had much to do with his better work.

Glover Has Improved.

He had more style to his action than previously and used good judgment in the range of his blows and kept pushing them in with full power behind.

The first preliminary only went a round, when it was stopped. Young Jimmy Sullivan had it all over Young Gardener, Joe Cheney and a well-merited decision over Eddie O'Neil of South Boston in six rounds. He had a big advantage in height and reach on his opponent.

BIG BOXING CARD AT CHELSEA TO-NIGHT

The members of the Winnisimmet Athletic club will see five boxing bouts of ten rounds of a boxing program, and with other entertainers that will appear an abundance of amusement is in store for the members.

The bout is an event that is attracting wide attention, for with Larry Cooley of South Boston opposed to a man of the type of Tim Russell of Philadelphia for ten rounds, the members know that one of the best sessions of slugging that could possibly be arranged is in store for them.

Kelley, the new champion from the market, will have a most thorough test, for Bill McKinnon, who is to meet him, has just returned from Northboro, where he has conditioned himself perfectly.

Around the match between Kid Fresmon and Willie Riley, the lightweights who are to exchange wallops for the championship of South Boston, there hovers much interest. The boys have been the warmest of rivals for years, and the ten rounds that they are to be principals in should be filled with brilliant affairs.

Alfred Anderson, the terrible Swede, and Eddie O'Neil, and they are hard hitters.

BASEBALL WAR MAY BREAK OUT TO-DAY

NEW YORK, Oct. 29.—With the air full of vague rumors and war talk, the National Association of Professional Baseball Clubs, which is the great minor league organization, will hold its formal meeting at the Fifth Avenue Hotel to-day.

It is persistently said that the National Association faces a possible disruption and war with the major leagues at the meeting to-day. The American Association, one of the most powerful members of the body, has openly threatened to withdraw and put an outlaw club in Chicago.

The Pacific Coast League is also dissatisfied, and Hurt of Frisco has resigned from membership in the national board. Cal Ewing, president of the league, will take his place.

President Tuber and Secretary McHenry of the Boston Americans were on hand and the latter declared his club was not looking for a manager. "We have a good one in Jim McGuire," he said, "and we are going to keep him."

BET ON WEEKS TO STAY LIMIT WITH ATTELL

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 29.—Abe Attell, the featherweight champion of the world, and Freddie Weeks, the little cyclone from Cripple Creek, Col., who are to fight here to-night for the title that Attell now holds, yesterday finished up their training for the battle and both camps announced that the fighters are in fine condition. Every round of the twenty to be contested is expected to be a hummer, and although Attell will be a big favorite, his opponent is expected to put up a hard and game battle from start to finish.

The articles of the fight call for a battle at 122 pounds ringside, and both Attell and Weeks are now at the right figure.

There is comparatively little betting on the result of the fight as yet. It is expected that many bets will be placed by supporters of Weeks to-night backing him to last the entire twenty rounds.

FAMOUS PACER DEAD.

CHESTER, Pa., Oct. 29.—Frank Yokum, a famous pacer, who has equaled eight track records and lowered 28 half-mile records, died to-day at the Moore Brook stock farm near here.

Yokum, the property of Charles Longbotham of this city, was by Parker, dam Jane White, and was conceded by all horsemen to be one of the fastest pacers that was ever in a race.

BALDWIN FIT FOR BOUT WITH SULLIVAN TO-NIGHT

BALTIMORE, Oct. 29.—The fifteen-round battle between "Matty" Baldwin of Boston and Kid Sullivan of Washington, which will be pulled off here to-night, promises to be the biggest fight held here for some time. Both boys have worked hard to win the big end of the purse, as well as a match with "Harlem Tommy" Murphy of New York, who will in all probability be matched against the winner.

Baldwin is the same style of boxer as Sullivan, which means a fast mill. Both are in-fighters. Sullivan's greatest punches were brought in that manner, and the long, rangy boxers have proved difficult problems for the Washington fighter.

Baldwin is a short, rugged fighter and has always had to fight over a hundred mills, has never been knocked out, some thing which few boxers can boast of. He is showing fast form in his training work and is picked by many to win, though Burke is many pounds heavier than Baldwin, the Boston lad can show a good punch with his sparring partner.

While Burke has never seen Sullivan in a long mill, he is of the opinion that Baldwin will secure a verdict over the Washington kid through his manager, Johnny Mack. Baldwin has challenged Joe Gans and Mack stated in the communication that if Baldwin stopped Sullivan he would get a chance to get the premier lightweight of the world into a match. In challenging the fans in behalf of Baldwin, Mack wishes the match to be on the same conditions as when Battling Nelson fought the Baltimore boy at Goldfield. He wants the weight to be at 133 pounds in ring costume, and was a forfeit of $2,500 posted with the Philadelphia Inquirer the latter to lose to box any man in the world at 133 pounds.

The announcement that Tim Hurst will referee the battle to-night will, no doubt, add much interest to the fight. He is one of the scrappiest men who ever stepped inside a roped arena, and is probably as capable a referee as George Siler of Chicago.

LANGFORD AT LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 29.—Sam Langford, the colored pugilist from Boston, accompanied by his manager, J. A. Woodman, have arrived in Los Angeles.

Langford is scheduled to meet Young Peter Jackson in a twenty-round fight at the Pacific Athletic Club of this city on November 12 or 15. He claims and looks the best of health and will start out at once to look for a place to train.

HARVARD TEAM TO MEET TECH

In the trial cross-country run of Harvard athletes to pick a team to meet Tech on Nov. 1, M. S. Crosby '09 was the pacer with a lead of 100 yards, M. H. Whitney '09 being his nearest competitor. The others who qualified finished in the following order: R. E. Dole '10, P. W. Carter '10, P. Woodman '10, R. Hoyt '10, F. W. Souder '10 and G. E. Brown '08. C. Lander '10 and H. F. Madden '09 were excused from the run, but were chosen as the two men to complete the team because of their splendid showing in the past few runs.

WIRELESS FROM TOMMY BURNS

Wireless messages received from Champion Tommy Burns, who is aboard the Deutschland, bound for Europe:

"Fifty miles from Boston. All is well. I will fight Johnson if the purse is big enough."

Message No. 2, 75 miles out:

"I will fight Johnson, winner take all, and then take Ireland on third."

Message No. 3, 100 miles out:

"If Jeffries will go over the ring I will fight Johnson and agree to stop him in ten rounds."

Message No. 4, 200 miles out:

"I wish I had Johnson and Jeffries on board this ship—I would show them who the real champion is."

Message No. 5, 300 miles out:

"I will take Jeffries, Johnson, Burns, Moir and O'Brien one after the other. Line them up."

Message No. 6, 1,000 miles out:

"Supply of dope is gone. Burns has retired. Wife will not allow him to fight any one."

WALSH TO BOX HARRY BAKER

A star bout has been made for Chelsea Club members next Tuesday night, when Jimmy Walsh and Harry Baker of Revere will meet at 122 pounds.

Baker has been in the Philadelphia some time, but will come to the Hub to-day and finish his work here.

A 'devil' heavyweight competition will also be slated Tuesday.

Notes of the Diamond

Dr. Howard is fruitfully angry at Fred Tenney. Fred pushed Del out of the tall-end Boston into the world's championship, and that is something to do.

Hal Chase, the Yankees' famous first-baseman, has joined the San Jose team and is fairly murdering the ball. In addition to his work at the finishing game, Harry Wolter of the Cardinals is expected to join the club within the next few days. He will likely perform in center. Elmer Stricklett and Jakey Harry Krause's pace will be a hot one.

Many of the managers are already planning trips south for 1908, instead of parting in their Winter's supply of coin.

George Jones of the Cincinnati Nationals has announced his retirement from baseball. It is just about time every one of the players made their Farewells, but they are really now to be seen in the diamond pastime as long as they are carried on the payrolls.

Pitcher Wadell of Danville, Vt., who has signed with the Cubs, is an inch taller and fifteen pounds heavier than his famous brother, Ed, of the Whitesox. It may turn out that these pitchers will be known as the Waddell brothers, which will help him this is a diminutive one should an outsider manage to get between them. Both are left-handed twirlers. Thats baseball.

Clarence Beaudoin of the Dallas club of the Texas League, has been drafted by the Senators, but doubts are expressed that he will be able to make good, as his name will be too hard for the fans to pronounce. Beaudoin is said to be a .350 hitter.

Pitcher Johnson has given a $250 diamond ring to his playmate, Pitcher Russell Ruhl to mind to give them after that, and Ruhl is now wearing the ring on his finger.

Jack Flaherty and Harry Scharfold are to join forces next season, and the former will be remembered from the world series. Better go over and see them.

The first base problem is worrying the Nats. It is said that Pitcher Smith of Atlanta, Ga., is dickering with Manager Dovey for the worry bug.

Ed. Green owns the old war horse Tinker, 2.07¾, having loaned him as warmup for 2.06 at Lexington.

Henry Titer has a horse of having pranked out only 2.10 trotter from the Village Farm product excepting Ed. Green, the mare Chime Bells, 2.06¾, being to the credit of the Readville trainer.

General Watts engaged Jack Quinn as one of the men for a stallion of his age, soon he went in charge at Lexington.

Katherine L., ch. g., 2.12¾, will be bred to Kentucky Todd, 2.08¾, in the spring, and they are counting on a sure Futurity winner from the result.

The pacer Northern Spy, 2.15¾, the best performer in the year to come out of Maine, has been sold by C. C. Jackson, of Mt. Desert, to parties in Derry, N. H., and is now in the stable of Harry Brooks.

Notes of the Harness Horses

Ralph B. Williams is reducing his racing stable by sending a few stallions to Kruger, 2.04, Cobden, 2.09¼, and several others.

It is not generally known that Tregantle, 2.09¼, which was sold at the Fasig-Tipton sale in 1903 at Columbus, and Lucrative, sold at the N. H. Tenney, of Methuen, Mass., but was foaled in Kentucky. It is said that Lucrative is a full sister to the betting end in the same mare, while Cox did the engraving in the name. Both are trotters, and as a ring a strong pair to beat when they get their heads together.

Eighty-five mares and 32 trotters were added to the 2:10 list this year, making the total 1,000. This now comprise over 1,100 performers.

George G., 2.05¾, holds the half-mile track record now with his mile in 2.06¾ against the watch.

Notes of the Boxers.

The Missouri Athletic Club of St. Louis will hold a big amateur boxing tournament, beginning November 4.

Fred Landers is after a match with Charley Neary, the Milwaukee lightweight, or Packy McFarland.

Jack Morgan of Indianapolis, who is to meet Jimmy Gardner in a ten-round bout at Cincinnati the night of election, is a clever boxer and one who have seen him in action also speak highly of his abilities. He has an even build for a welterweight, and I bet confident I will score a knockout.

Billy Hogan, manager of Mike Schreck, the Western heavyweight, has received an offer from the club in Guthrie, Okla., to fight Young Peter Jackson three Thanksgiving Day. The battle is to be a finish at ratchesweights. Schreck would rather meet on Al Kaufman, who has been after him for the match, but failing in that will accept the Negro fighter.

Jack (Twin) Sullivan is not overlooking any bets while he is engaged in Los Angeles. He has tossed a little ball about meeting Horns, saying he made Tommy Ryan run out, and this week he is giving boxing exhibitions at one of the big parks there with Abdul, the Turk, the giant who fooled Jack O'Brien.

BOSTON DAY AND ANNA HELD AT FOOD FAIR

Actress and Her Company to See the Bread "Mother Used to Make."

GILMORE NIGHT THIS EVE

Anna Held is to learn to-day how they bake Mother's Bread, how fifty-seven or more varieties of breakfast food taste, who is pure milk and a lot of other timely information.

The vivacious girls and other members of Miss Held's company are likewise going to learn all these things, for to-day the piquant Anna and her fellow members of "A Parisian Model" company go to the big Food Fair in Mechanics Building. They say—at least the press agent says, and he ought to know, that Miss Anna will be just as interested at the Food Fair as on the stage. It is declared on authority which we have pledged to keep secret—but which is nevertheless pledged—that Miss Held will sample everything in the fair from soup to nuts down to chewing gum and the weighing machine.

She is scheduled to be at the Fair this afternoon, with her company. While the attractive girl demonstrators have appropriated most of the press's admiration at the Fair for themselves so far, they will have rivals for favor in Miss Held and her girls.

The sight of a flock of chorus girls all eating Teddy Bear kisses at the same time is going into ecstasies over the Albino cow at the Hood exhibit—the beasts with the "cunning eyes," as one city girl expressed it, is one calculated to move the masculine heart.

To-day is also Greater Boston Day at the Food Fair and to-night is to be Gilmore Night.

710 INPERIL AS BIG LINER GOES ASHORE

DOVER, Eng., Oct. 29.—The Red Star liner Finland is here, badly damaged, having gone ashore on the Goodwin Sands in the channel. The collision with the stone work was followed by dramatic incidents while the big ship was firing rockets to summon assistance.

The Finland, which left New York October 19, for Dover and Antwerp, has 710 passengers aboard, and there was the greatest confusion when she struck.

Passengers who had gone to their staterooms rushed out in fear, while those on the decks scurried about pleading to be told the extent of the danger.

They were reassured by the ship's officers, however, and ordered signals for lifeboats from the harbor.

person on the ship was harmed, but a man on the breakwater was injured. He will die.

PIANOS AND ORGANS.

ROXBURY STORAGE SALESROOMS WHERE PIANOS ARE SACRIFICED

Fighting the Piano Trust

The name "Piano Trust" sounds big, looks powerful and frightens a good many small piano dealers. Nevertheless, it cannot cut the price on a Piano. Roxbury Storage Salesrooms are getting their prices for months—cutting—slashing—and still slaughtering their prices, and have been whipping the Big Piano Trust representatives in every E. E. State. We confess that we are making no money during this sale, we are still in the ring and selling almost any make of high-grade pianos, new, for one-third and, at prices that make the Big Piano Trust tremble.

A Piano Sale here is always a sacrifice, always a bargain sale, always a mark-down sale. The very nature of the business, as the public knows, is one of sacrifice. Roxbury Storage Salesrooms' business not conducted like the business of a regular Piano store; here you know what they are expected to make a profit on each piano—where their profit comes from—they are out of the sale of pianos. We don't let any piano half around on the floors for the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms—it comes in DUE

Fighting the Piano Trust

The name "Piano Trust" sounds big, looks powerful and frightens a good many small piano dealers. Nevertheless, it cannot cut the price on a Piano. Roxbury Storage Salesrooms' business not conducted like the business of a regular Piano store; here you know what they are expected to make a profit on each piano—where their profit comes from—they are out of the sale of pianos. We don't let any piano half around on the floors for the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms—it comes in DUE

BETTER THE DOG'S DEATH THAN THE BABY'S

Experiments on Animals, Humanely Conducted, Are Necessary to the Advance of Medical Science

The newspaper which is crying out against the experiments on animals conducted in the great Rockefeller institute apparently would prefer to sacrifice the lives of human beings to disease rather than require the lives of rabbits, dogs and guinea pigs in experiments that are necessary to the advance of science.

The newspaper in question has discovered that the institute maintains a farm for the breeding of animals to be experimented upon, and frantically clamors for the officers of the law to wipe it from the map.

Animal experiments may not be pleasant parlor entertainments, and USELESS EXPERIMENTS, like that of the Chicago gentlemen who took out a rat's brains to see if the rat cared, are brutal and should be prohibited.

But without experiments on animals VACCINATION, which has made the dreadful scourge of smallpox no longer feared, would be impossible, and children would continue to die by hundreds of diphtheria, because with no experimenting on animals there would have been no discovery of the antitoxin which has made that disease as easy to combat as smallpox with vaccine virus.

The most humane mother, seeing the family dog and the family baby in front of a street car, would probably save the baby rather than the dog.

And if the dog and the baby developed hydrophobia at the same time, it is likely than she would send the baby to the Pasteur Institute and ORDER THE KILLING OF THE DOG.

Such institutions as that established by Mr. Rockefeller will in time teach physicians the cause and cure of nearly all, if not all, of the fearful epidemics which sweep through the great cities, to be followed by the crape at the doors and the dreary, mournful funeral processions.

Only by the study of disease—by closely following the work of the germs which cause it, examining them microscopically and discovering a means to destroy them without destroying their victim—can a means be found to deliver mankind from its clutches.

A few years ago hydrophobia, even in its mildest form, was fatal. Then Pasteur, experimenting on animals, found a way to treat it and to cure many cases.

Soon came the discovery of the antitoxin which has saved thousands of children from the fatal diphtheria.

Lately it was announced that a means had been found to combat the cerebro-spinal meningitis, or spotted fever, that spreads death and terror through the tenements in the Spring, and that it would soon be developed so as to be as effective as antitoxin.

Still many maladies, like pneumonia, tetanus, or lockjaw, and cancer defy medical skill; but hundreds of carefully trained men are studying them through long, tedious experiments, which often last the lifetime of the experimenter, who passes his notes and his work to a younger successor.

In time ALL THESE DISEASES will be understood, AND WILL BE CURED.

But it is only by experiments on animals that these results will be possible.

The human race was endowed by the Creator with mind and SOUL, and rightly considers its existence more important than that of dogs and rats and rabbits and guinea pigs.

If the Rockefeller institute is maintaining a farm for the breeding of these animals, it is certainly no more inhumane than any agriculturist who maintains a farm for the breeding of sheep and cattle and pigs and chickens, which are grown simply to be slaughtered for food for human beings.

In all institutions and colleges where animals are experimented upon care is taken to avoid inflicting pain. Students are not permitted to operate on animals unless the animals are placed under the influence of anaesthetics, and when the experiments are over, if the animal's death is necessary, it is effected by an additional application of the merciful ether or chloroform.

The results that have already been accomplished are sufficiently wonderful to justify the experiments.

The results to come will be far greater.

To endeavor to excite popular indignation against medical research by the use of animal experiments is merely a foolish and stupid way of blocking human progress and of encouraging much unnecessary sacrifice of human life in the future.

Moran to Webster

A Thing Which Bears Repeating

"YOU 'believe the public of Suffolk County is desirous of a change' and that 'a young man can inject more new blood into this office than an older one' and for these reasons you are 'a candidate for the office of District Attorney.'

"You are evidently not familiar with public sentiment, otherwise you would not declare that the 'public is desirous of a change.'

"'New blood' is a splendid thing as a substitute for corrupt blood, but since neither you nor anyone else can truthfully charge me with corruption, there is no force in your statement. You admit your want of experience in the criminal courts. I have had twenty odd years of it on both sides. I know the tricks of criminals and the tactics of lawyers. None of them ever fool me. I know the honest from the dishonest witness. I know the sound lawyer from the shyster. I know the genuine criminal from the unfortunate victim of circumstances.

"Let me say to you, Mr. Webster, that the only pleasant thing about this office is the power it gives to lift fallen humanity to its feet, to save the unfortunate from the tortures of a prison, to give the handclasp of encouragement to a despairing soul. The public commendation of a successful prosecution of a grafter dwindles into insignificance when one recalls the 'God bless you' from a mother's lips as you give her boy or girl liberty with another chance to reform.

"When all other incidents of my official life shall be forgotten by me, there will still linger the memory of the little Italian boy brought from Baltimore on a false charge, who, when liberated by me and furnished with money for his trip back to his home, clasped my hand with his little fingers and, tears of joy and gratitude streaming down his cheeks, impulsively kissed the hand he held in his own.

How to Meet the Man Who Rings Your Bell

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

If you will only put this in a prominent place in your Tuesday's issue you will completely baffle "Fitz" in his canvass for Dennison:

"Tell the man who rings your bell and inquires which way you are going to vote election day THAT IT IS NONE OF HIS BUSINESS."

Ninety per cent. of the city employes, of which I am one, and who are going to vote for Moran, would be thankful. "FAIR PLAY."

Woman at Last Enjoys Conditions That Seem to Make Her Equality With Man a Possibility

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE chief pleasure of Man today seems to be found in the discussion of Woman. Books about, for and against the "equality" of woman abound, the latest and most distinctive being "Sex Equality," by Eunice Densmore, M. D. (Funk & Wagnalls.)

The theories advanced by Dr. Densmore are based on the teachings of Darwin and Spencer, as well as on those of the latest and foremost supporters of the doctrines of evolution. "Sex Equality" teaches that women are more intuitive, refined, unselfish and spiritual, but at the present time are distinctly inferior to man in initiative, resource, power and breadth of view.

Not Fundamental

"Sex Equality" shows that these mental differences between men and women are not fundamental, nor the result of sex, but are caused by environment and heredity; that when each sex is fully developed there will not be, as now, masculine traits and feminine traits, but simply human traits; that women will be as mathematical, logical, philosophical and inventive as men, and men will be as intuitive, refined and spiritual as women.

"Sex Equality" is a strong plea for extending democracy into all phases of human life. Furthermore, there are given good reasons for believing that the diminutive stature and inferior strength now characteristic of women are the result not of sex, but of habits of life and heredity. Those who accept the doctrine of evolution will have difficulty in denying these conclusions.

Wordsworth's Poem

THEN there is a reference to a poem by Wordsworth, which was "Addressed to a young woman who had been criticised for taking long walks in the country."

In view of the athletic achievements of our young women to-day, Mr. Wordsworth's poem becomes very humorous. But it goes to prove why woman has long remained inferior physically.

Dr. Densmore argues that woman's seeming inferiority to man is wholly due to her having been deprived of his advantages and freedom. He tells us that in primitive times women did much the larger share of drudgery; they skinned the animals, tanned the hides, cooked the food, and the men took the most nutritious portions and left the women the remainder.

And that explains, he says, the frailer stature and weaker physical development of the female sex.

The greater size, strength, courage, pugnacity and energy of man were gained in primeval times, and have been augmented mainly through the contests of rival males for the possession of females.

Gets First Choice

ACCORDING to this, the women of America ought to grow in stature, energy and force with the passing of each generation, for surely here they live upon the best the land affords, and nowhere among native born Americans is the "remainder" their share. First choice always falls to the woman.

Dr. Densmore is most gallant in his defence of the fair sex. He insists that intellectual, gifted and brainy women are possessed of increasing physical attractions. He refers to young Otto Weininger, who published a belligerent attack upon woman in 1901, contending that she was by nature hopelessly man's inferior physically, mentally and morally, and that all intellectual women were abnormal and usually ugly. And our gallant Dr. Densmore points to the significant fact that the author of this book committed suicide at the age of twenty-one.

Let us hope that Dr. Densmore will, accordingly, live to be a hundred, and write many more books in scientific defence of our much discussed sex.

Little Editorials from the People

"HAS TO DRAW THE LINE SOMEWHERE."

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

It is my humble opinion that the Democratic (?) candidates (all of them on both sides of the brawl of the present State campaign are entitled to a large slice of "lemon."

In times past I have been known to vote the Democratic ticket, but this year, well—I'll take the reinstallated game under the Independence League standard, for I'm not fussy about the name.

Had the convention (?) at Springfield nominated a list of candidates of standing and fair respectability I could have voted for 'em with a clear conscience, but a fellow has got to draw the line some where.
